Some Speeches, and Plans

Another Long Sermon

A New Car, Coming

By Arthur Brisbane

YOU WILL BE GLAD to hear that Roger W. Babson, who told us in 1929 that we were just stepping on the toboggan, downward bound, now says trade is on the upgrade. He predicts that we have seen the worst of our troubles, and that a prosperity is coming greater than that which ended in the autumn of 1929.

The President agrees with that optimistic prediction, and Wall Street, cheering up a little yesterday, increased hope.

When renewed prosperity does come, it may come with a rush surpassing all experience.

You will read today what President Hoover and Calvin Coolidge said yesterday at the tomb of President Harding. You will perhaps not read all that they THOUGHT.

The President's speech in Indianapolis on Monday began his campaign for 1932, presumably. What he said about plans for the "twenty million increase in population in the next twenty years" was inspiring. He knows as well as anybody that the country at present is interested in the six or eight million people out of work, NOW, rather than the twenty millions that will be born later.

However, there seems to be no definite plan for the six million idle, and perhaps the next best thing is to plan generously and carefully for 20,000,000 that haven't come yet.

The President would "plan to build for them (the 20,000,000 not yet arrived) 4,000,000 new and better homes, thousands of new city buildings, thousands of factories." This to be followed by plans to "increase capacity of railroads, add thousands of miles of highways and waterways, install 25,000,000 electrical horsepower, grow 20 per cent more farm products."

Perhaps the President will plan to do all or part of that work NOW. Many now would gladly move from slums to "4,000,000 new and better homes." As for the "new parks, schools, colleges for the 20,000,000 people," it would be appreciated, if they were built now to supply work.

The President appears to be a little impatient with the many demanding "a plan," and says: "I presume the plan idea is an infection from the slogan of the five-year plan, through which Russia is struggling to redeem herself from ten years of starvation and misery."

Russia, as readers of history generally understand it, is striving to redeem herself from FIVE HUNDRED YEARS OF SLAVERY AND MISERY. Misery did not begin in Russia with the arrival of Lenin. It existed under Ivan the Terrible and those that preceded him and followed him.

Who knows anything, knows that, for 99 out of 100 Russians, these are the best, because they are the most encouraging and hopeful times that Russia has ever known.

There is no use being foolish about it and contradicting facts.

The peasants, for the first time, OWN their land, even though an autocratic government may tell them how they must cultivate the land. Peasants and workmen have a right to look at any man they meet in the face as an equal. They don't cringe and grovel as they used to do, and kiss the hand of any man wearing a black coat.

The long sermon record has traveled from Washington, D. C., to Los Angeles. The Rev. J. D. Brown, clergyman of Washington, preached a little over 14 hours. The Rev. Dr. A. F. Futterer, 60 years old, finished a sermon 20 hours long last Sunday.

And the Rev. Futterer lived on lemon juice, nothing else, whereas the Rev. Brown ate mutton chops and chicken and took liquid nourishment, during his sermon.

Albert D. Lasker has established, by careful investigation, the fact that lemons, because of their vitamin content, contribute enormously to health and energy.

That may explain the Rev. Dr. Futterer's triumph.

Detroit reports that Chrysler, the automobile man, has spent $10,000,000 getting ready "to invade the $500 price field with a four cylinder car, claiming

LINER BERMUDA BURNS AT PIER

Hamilton, Bermuda, June 17 (AP)—The $8,000,000 motor ship Bermuda, operated by the Furness-Bermuda line between here and New York, sank at her pier today with her bridge and superstructure burned away and her stern resting on the bottom.

There was an explosion just before British sailors and marines arrived to assist the Hamilton fire brigade, but it was only exploding distress rockets ignited by the flames which had eaten into the chart rooms.

Capt. Harry Davis, directing the firemen, flooded the oil storage tanks astern and the ship's rear end settled on the coral bottom. Three hours and a half after the fire started it was under control.

Tourists crowded the waterfront, watching the partial destruction of the handsome vessel which had brought them here and was to have taken them back this morning.

When they came too close, police and marines with fixed bayonets pressed them back from the danger zone, for there was still a possibility the oil tanks might explode.

Four men were badly burned and taken to a hospital, but there was no loss of life and no passengers were aboard. . . .

Nearly all the luggage which had been put aboard was saved and the stranded passengers are being accommodated at a hotel until another Furness vessel can pick up the Bermuda's passengers.

The Bermuda is a 19,000-ton motor ship, built at Belfast in 1927. She can accommodate nearly 700 passengers and has all the improvements of the modern floating hotel.

GALVIN TELLS STORY OF MURDER

Testifies Hathaway Said "I Hit Her"; Describes Visit to the Death Scene

By WIN BROOKS
Boston Evening American Staff Correspondent

He said that his pal, Elliott R. Hathaway, on trial for the murder of Verna E. Russell, took him to the hotel at Tiverton after midnight of March 23 and admitted hitting the girl.

Hathaway told him he hit her because they had argued.

"She told me she was engaged to an interne. We had an argument and I hit her," Galvin quoted him as saying.

The 28-year-old playboy son of a Fall River legislator was afraid of prison, he said.

"He asked me if I would visit him if he went to the big house."

In an even voice in a courtroom in which there was no other sound, Galvin told his dramatic, long-awaited story on which the state seeks to imprison Hathaway for life for the alleged strangling of the student nurse.

He told of arriving in Tiverton lane after midnight in Hathaway's car.

"THERE SHE IS"

Hathaway stopped the car 50 yards in on the lonely lane, he said, and pointed out the window.

"There she is," he quoted him as saying.

He showed how Hathaway had pointed into the darkness.

"He backed up the car a few feet and said: 'It's right there,

PLAYBOY'S PAL TELLS STORY

Starr's Girlhood Love Affairs Revealed

New York, June 17—Love tours Starr Faithfull took with a wealthy friend of her family when she was a student at Rogers Hall School at Lowell, Mass., were revealed in her own notations today, when her schoolgirl "Memory Book" was given out by her stepfather.

There are two motor journeys in the pathetic "Memory Book," as made public by Stanley E. Faithfull —journeys with the man declared to have paid over $20,000 in 1927 in settlement for indiscretions with her when she was only 11 years old.

Her first trip with the wealthy man, Starr's recordings reveal, was in "summer of 1925," when Starr was 17, and led up through Maine and to Quebec, with overnight hotel stops at various points.

STOPPED AT HOTELS

The second love journey began on August 21, 1923, with New York as destination, and with hotel rooms occupied at New London, Ct., New York and, coming back, at Springfield, Mass.; Worcester and Providence.

And a short time after her return from the second trip, Starr

ROWLEY SAYS 'SHAKEDOWN' WAS TRIED IN BOSTON

Lincoln, N. Y., June 17 (AP)—Asst. Dist. Atty. Malcolm W. Littleton, Jr., informed the Nassau county authorities today he had located and questioning a man described as Bruce Winston, supposed companion of Starr Faithfull before her disappearance on June 3, 1930.

Littleton found the man in offices at 1385 Broadway, Manhattan, where he was known as Morris Eeske.

Bruce Winston and Jack Greenaway were the names Starr Faithfull's parents said she gave them as her companions at a party on June 4, and when she said she was going to meet on Friday, the day she vanished.

Attorney Charles F. Rowley today confirmed the Boston Evening American's exclusive story that a bold attempt was made only a few weeks ago to "shakedown" the Boston millionaire who five years ago made a $20,000 settlement with Starr Faithfull, slain Boston and New York beauty.

Further information on this attempted blackmail, which New York investigating authorities believe is closely linked with the murder of the exotic playgirl, was also supplied by the Boston lawyer.

Other leading developments in the murder probe today were:

1—G. Jameson Carr, ship's doctor on the Franconia, will arrive Friday in New York to testify before the grand jury. He received a letter after Starr's death, telling him she would be dead when he read it.

FIND MISSING MAN

2—Starr reported seen in a long black roadster the day she disappeared. Search launched for the machine, which is said to have resembled a car owned by one of the men in the case.

4—Witnesses say Starr was in a drugged condition in a 42d st. building the day she dropped from sight.

5—John W. Davis, former Democratic candidate for President, as a friend of ex-Mayor Andrew J. Peters of Boston, stands in New York that Peters had no information of value to the authorities.

6—Finding of Ernest Bliss, alias Richard Bruce, in London. He is said to have been with Starr on June 3, the day of her disappearance.

7—Announcement by Miriam Hopkins, actress, that Starr might have attended her farewell party and there met two other men, who are being sought, although Miss Hopkins recalls none of them.

Q—A water-soaked, sand-ingrained straw hat was found today at Long Beach, not far from where Starr's body was discovered. It was taken by detectives to the Faithfull home for identification.

DETECTIVES HERE

Atty. Rowley who confirmed the Boston Evening American's exclusive story of a blackmail plot, represented the Faithfull family in the settlement five years ago with the wealthy Boston man who allegedly despoiled the girl in childhood.

Investigation authorities believe that Starr might have been slain

Starr Loved Him

Starr Faithfull's real love story is expected to be told when Dr. G. Jameson Carr, ship's surgeon on the liner Franconia, arrives in New York Friday and appears before the Nassau County grand jury. Starr wrote that she loved him, but he did not love her. (I. N. R. photo.)

for attempting to interfere with this plot.

While Rowley has no information on this angle, the Boston Evening American has learned that private detectives, hired by unidentified persons with plenty of money at their command, are working feverishly to uncover the plotters and lay bare the whole game.

"It is a fact," said Rowley, "that some time this spring information came to me that a man who said he was a New York writer had called on a certain gentleman in Boston, stating he understood the Boston man had been victim of a 'badger game.'

"I was asked to find out if Mr. Faithfull had been discussing the case which was the subject of a settlement five years ago. Of course, that settlement was a legitimate one, based on a proper legal claim.

PROBE HAD STARTED

"I talked with Mr. Faithfull on the telephone and he replied that he couldn't imagine what I was talking about and that he had said nothing to anybody. That ended it."

Investigators believe that the story of Starr Faithfull's strange childhood came into the possession of a small group, numbering only two or three, who tried to cash in on it by a psuedo threat of publication.

As the Boston Evening American has previously exclusively disclosed, investigation of this plot by Boston lawyers will still under way, and Faithfull was in Boston, supposedly in connection therewith, to give what help he could when Starr disappeared to be found dead a few days later on Long Beach, N. Y.

What had she learned of the attempt of others to profit by her past experience, which had wrecked and distorted her life, according to her stepfather?

Had she been put out of the way because she had learned?

Atty. Rowley made his statement reluctantly and only to correct reports emanating from New York.

New York authorities announced that the black roadster of expensive make in which Starr is reported having been seen on the day she vanished, has been traced to a spot on Fordham rd., which leads out of New York City toward Boston.

A corps of detectives are specially assigned to track it down and question the owner. Starr's actions on the last two days of her life are now the prime concern of Dist. Atty. Elvin Edwards.

WHO PAYS THEM?

Disclosure of a private investigation here and in New York of the attempt to "shake down" the wealthy Boston man a few weeks ago, caused official probers to turn a large share of the attention to this amazing angle of the mystery.

Employed by an anonymous group, evidently with plenty of resources, three private detectives are in Boston trying to lay bare the whole conspiracy, the Boston Evening American learned.

The chief operative in this secret probe was identified by the Boston Evening American as Irving J. Smith, with headquarters at 10th st. and Broadway, N. Y. However, when asked who had employed him, Smith refused to make any comment.

Who is behind it, and why, has not yet come to light. But this much is certain. Either one man or a group of men is spending $1000 per day to find out who drugged the unlucky Starr and left her to drown at Long Beach 10 nights ago.

Acting guardedly and without the knowledge of police, they have back-tracked on the hectic life of the charmingly cultured girl, both here and in New York. And each night a voluminous though cryptic report of their discoveries has been passed on to their rich retainers.

Smith confronted with information obtained from other sources, admitted he had operatives working on the Faithfull murder case.

SUICIDE, HIS OPINION

Some of his men have been delving into the New York phases of the mystery, he said, while others followed clues centering in Boston. But when he was asked pointblank who was putting up the small fortune required for such an investigation, and what might be the interest of his client, he answered with rising agitation that he was not at liberty to say.

Apparently anxious to draw his interrogator away from the identity of those financing his inquiry, Smith declared it seemed possible the girl had committed suicide. But he neglected to make his theory jibe with official findings in the case.

He said that perhaps the girl had joined in a summer cottage party, that she drank heavily, and that on Saturday night, unable to sleep from the effects of the liquor, she had taken veronal, and gone for a walk on the beach. Almost poetically, the sleuth depicted Starr's theoretical end.

"Then the neurotic girl, sick of life and unable to find a new thrill," he said, "found herself fascinated by the ocean. The monotonous pounding of the waves and the soft sigh of the receding surf beckoned her to seek new thrills in the great unknown. I can see her walking into the sea, to be enveloped by its waters and then thrown back on the sands—lifeless."

GIRL INTOXICATED

Smith, however, failed—either by accident or with deliberate intent—to take into consideration the medical examiner's statement that the veronal was more than sufficient in quantity to throw the girl into a deep sleep before she could walk to the beach. And more important still, the autopsy showed that she died about Friday midnight, instead of Saturday night.

Three weeks ago a lawyer went from this city to New York to investigate this plot and to discover the identity of the plotters. He questioned Stanley Faithfull, stepfather of the slain girl, who said Starr might have "babbled" to strangers.

Faithfull said the lawyer's name was Drew. Today Atty. John H. Drew of State st., Boston, emphatically denied being the man.

"I never met Faithfull or any of his family, or anybody by that name, in New York or anywhere else," said Drew. "If Faithfull says I called on him, it's untrue."

The location of Bruce, also known as Blue, in London, ended a city-wide search for him in New York, and his statement there tended to corroborate one made to Inspector Harold R. King, of the Nassau police, by Murray Edelman, a taxicab driver. Both Edelman and C. W. Anderson, a young Greenwich Village artist who also admitted having met Bruce, have been subpoenaed to appear before the Nassau County grand jury when it resumes its hearings of witnesses in the strange murder case on Friday.

Edelman declared he had picked up a young woman, whom he identified from newspaper photographs as Starr Faithfull, and a man at the Cunard Line pier on the North River the Friday afternoon the girl was last seen alive.

She was evidently intoxicated, the chauffeur said, and her companion, wearing the blue, brass-buttoned coat and label of a Cunard Line attache, was endeavoring to get her away from the pier.

RETURNED TO PIER

He placed her in the cab and got in beside her, according to Edelman, and gave instructions that they be driven to 12 St. Luke's pl., the Faithfull home. When they arrived there, the driver said, the girl alighted alone and with a wave of her hand to her companion staggered up the short flight of stairs to her door. Edelman quoted her farewell to the bluecoated man as:

"Bye bye, Brucie. See you at the walk at about 4 o'clock."

His remaining fare, the taxi man said, drove back to the pier, but an hour later reappeared from the Cunard freight entrance, again leading the staggering girl. He placed her back in the cab and instructed the driver, under no circumstances, to allow her to return.

But Starr drove only a few blocks, then announced that she had only 10 cents, quit the cab and when he last saw her, Edelman said, she was going back to the Cunard pier.

Bruce, in London, told Scotland Yard detectives, according to a cabled dispatch, that Starr Faithfull had accompanied him aboard the Mauretania that Friday before she vanished. The dispatch did not identify him, further than through his name, nor did it state whether he was attached to the Mauretania's staff.

It added, however, that Bruce declared he did not see the girl aboard the vessel after it was warped from its dock and steamed out of the harbor for Liverpool.

The search for Bruce and others aboard the liner who had known the girl was begun on early reports that she may have smuggled her way on to the ship and either leaped overboard, once it got to sea, in a suicidal attempt, or else had been thrown into the sea.

A check-up on the ocean tide appeared to discredit this theory, since it showed that if Starr had been drowned from the boat, her body would have been washed southward to the Jersey shore instead of up the coast to the spot on Long Beach where it was found.

WORKED AS MODEL

The mysterious name of Bruce or Blue also entered into the story told by the artist, Anderson. He told Asst. Dist. Atty. Martin W. Littleton, Jr., that both Starr and her 19-year-old sister, Elizabeth Tucker Faithfull, had posed as models in his studio at 47 Washington sq. south, N. Y.

But he said he had not cared for Starr's personality and also that she was inclined toward plumpness, and, in general, "was not a good model." On the other hand, Elizabeth—or "Tooka," as she calls herself—had sat for him on several occasions, dating as far back as last summer.

Early in the week she disappeared, or late in the previous week, the sandy-haired, amiable artist said, Starr reappeared at his studio and asked to pose. She explained, he said, that she needed money for a trip she planned to Europe.

From Los Angeles today Miss Miriam Hopkins in a telephone conversation with New York tried to help all she could to unravel the mystery enveloping the slain girl.

The party to Miss Hopkins, which Starr is said to have attended, was given the actress on May 29 by Bennet Corf, the publisher, at his home at 51 5th ave. It was a farewell party, as the stage star was leaving for Hollywood to be filmed in talking pictures.

INTRODUCED BY HAMLIN

"More than 100 persons were present," said Miss Hopkins today. "Many of them were total strangers to me.

"It's entirely possible Starr Faithfull was there and it may be I was introduced to her, but I do not remember her. Nor do I know anything about her except what I've read in the papers.

"I'm sorry that I don't recall either a Bruce Winton or Jack Greenaway, either."

Winton and Greenaway, the latter said to be an actor, are sought for information they may have regarding Starr's affairs during the few days preceding her death.

Starr is believed to have met them at the Hopkins farewell party, but it was not their first meeting, investigators say, as they were originally introduced by Francis Peabody Hamlin, the young Boston man, some time before.

Besides Greenaway and Winton, a beautiful blonde has been the subject of search for several days and it developed today that she was known as "Don," and that she and Starr frequented Greenwich Village Inn together.

TO MEET 2 MEN

Harold Meltzer, manager of the inn, which is situated in Sheridan sq., supplied the latter information. Meltzer said he recalled that the blonde, whose full name he did not know, once drove a taxicab, but whether this was for a lark or for regular income, he did not know. Cab license records are being checked up.

Starr has been quoted by her stepfather as saying that she intended to meet two men on Friday, June 5, the day of her disappearance, and he believes Greenaway and Winton were the men. They are not under suspicion but the authorities believe they can be of great help.

Officials emphasized that the Bruce Winton or Bruce Winston sought is not the English actor of the latter name, who has been appearing nightly in a production in London for weeks past.

Henry Goldstein, held as a fugitive from Los Angeles, was paroled in custody of his wife with the agreement that he would hold himself in readiness to tell all he knows to the grand jury of Nassau County.

"TOOKA" TOUGH FOE IN BATTLE OF WITS

By JOHN H. NOONAN
Boston Evening American Staff Correspondent

New York, June 17—The "Battle of Words" between Elizabeth Tucker "Tooka" Faithfull and Inspector Harold B. King went into its tenth day today with a shade advantage resting with the 19-year-old Greenwich Village enigma, sister of Starr "Bamby" Faithfull, whose drugged and bruised body was washed up on the Long Beach shore.

Starr — mystery in death, mystery in life — never puzzled her friends as much as her equally beautiful 19-year-old sister has puzzled the alert and resourceful Nassau County detective. King, a youth so far as detective bureau heads are concerned, but a veteran in handling crime investigations, has found a person his equal when it comes to handling conversation.

QUIZZES FRUITLESS

Within three hours after Inspector King first viewed the body of the "Village Butterfly," he made up his mind that "Tooka" was his best bet to find the solution of the mystery of Nassau.

Learning from the stepfather, another enigma, that the dead girl had a 19-year-old sister, King hied himself off to the "Village," down to St. Luke's pl., sometimes called home by Mayor James Walker.

Seated in an antique chair, facing the beautiful "Tooka," the Nassau sleuth felt confident that, after a short conversation, he would get all the data necessary to lead him to friends familiar with the last hours of Starr Faithfull.

"Tooka" did her part, he did his. They matched wits, theories, facts and what have you. Somewhat puzzled, but satisfied that he was loaded with good material, he started out to do his stuff.

BOTH HOLDING OUT

Reporters working on the Faithfull mystery today estimated that the 19-year-old girl and the youthful detective head, after spending 43 hours fencing with words, have passed between them more than 250,000 words. One hundred words a minute for 43 hours. Somebody is holding out!

What and why?

We know Brother King is holding out some of his conversation for obvious reasons. Maybe he's "taking it out" on us because "Tooka" is holding out on him.

If that is the case, we most certainly hope that "Tooka" throws up the sponge soon and gives up whatever the sleuth is looking for. The "sob sisters" planted on the front steps of the Faithfull apartment house, waiting for the battle of words to end, have already wagered whatever pay they have coming to them that the 19-year-old puzzle is eventually going to "leave the cat out of the bag" and send the sleuth after the persons who can explain the last hours of Starr.

Police Certain She Can Give Clue Leading to Starr's Slayer

That she will furnish THE story. Maybe she will, maybe she won't. But it's all right with the male side if she does. Here's hoping the child lets go. You keep us planted too long outside the closed door, "Tooka." Today's the day we hope.

FAITHFULL CHECKS UP

In all, the former Boston beauty—champion swimmer and sprinter, hockey player and one of the prettiest girls in school—listed 10 hotels at which she and the wealthy man stopped.

And Stanley E. Faithfull, who became her stepfather in 1926, declared that a checkup by him revealed that the man registered at the Hotel Lafayette in Portland, Me., taking an adjoining room for "S. Wyman," which then was Starr's real name.

The terse statement of her movements, appearing under the heading, "Summer of 1923," reads:

"July 2nd left with —— for North Haven in the car. Stayed at Portland over night in the lafryette (misspelled) hotel. Arrived at North Haven next day. Stayed at North Haven about two weeks and four days.

"We started for Canada about July 20. Stayed at a small inn somewhere around the borderline of Maine and Canada. Got to the Chateau Frontenac, Quebec, at about 6 next day. Stayed there two nights. Started for White Mountains and stayed at the Newport House in Vermont over night. Reached Bretton Woods in the White Mountains next day. Stayed there about three days. Then back to Marblehead."

IN SPRINGFIELD 5 DAYS

That ended the report on the first leisurely trip. The date of the return to Marblehead would appear to be July 28. Elsewhere in the book—a large, cheaply-bound, black volume—appear a postcard view of the Chateau Frontenac and a folder advertising the Mt. Washington Hotel, Bretton Woods.

Starr wrote that the second journey began on August 21.

"Started for New York August 21. Stayed at the Mohican Hotel, New London, over night. Got to New York next evening at about 6. Stayed at the Plaza Hotel. Left New York in about five days for Springfield, Mass. Stayed at the Hotel Kimball, Springfield. Saw Smith College."

Smith is at nearby Northampton.

"Next night stayed at the Bancroft in Worcester, Mass. Motored to Marblehead next morning. Stayed Sunday night at the Biltmore Hotel in Providence. Went to Barnstable next day."

The last two sentences the Faithfulls believe may refer to another, briefer trip.

TOOK OTHER JOURNEYS

However, the stubs antedate Starr's New York stay. She would not have arrived here until August 22. The stubs were for August 18 and 19. Unless she erred in dating her journey, she could not have used the tickets herself.

Elsewhere in the book, programs were pasted of the Ziegfeld Follies, "Helen of Troy, N. Y." and Edith Day in "Wild Flower." None bears a date falling within the time limit set by Starr for her stay in New York.

Efforts on the part of Mr. Faithfull—after he and Mrs. Faithfull say they discovered the relationship—to check hotel registers against Starr's story were rebuffed in most instances. A detective reported being unable to find Starr registered at the Worcester and Springfield hotels named.

The remainder of Starr's "memory book," its fading photographs and adolescent memorabilia marked with pathos by her later despair and her strange death, is remote from the mad, neurotic career she led in London and New York.

WAS A "NIGHT OWL"

In 1923 Starr got frequent demerits for being "noisy after lights" and sleeping through breakfast. She had trouble subduing her restlessness to keep boarding school bedtime hours. She liked to stay up late.

In London, in 1929, she was ejected from a swagger hotel for boisterousness; in New York, in 1931, officers on a liner put her, intoxicated and protesting, off their ship after it sailed.

In the spring semester at Rogers Hall, Starr, a sophomore, got C in English history, but A in drawing. She found Bible, English literature and theme writing and physiology difficult, being marked C in them. French, physical training and, oddly, accounts were easier. She got B in those subjects. Her average was above 80 per cent of perfect.

On May 7, 1923, Starr won the 50 yard dash at the founders' day field games. She was second in the hop-step-and-jump.

And on May 18 the girl whose bruised body came out of the surf at Long Beach a week ago last Monday made 149 points—the highest—in the annual interclub swimming meet.

GOT DEMERITS.

She attended the concert by the combined musical clubs of Phillips Academy, in the school hall, on December 8, and the prim, New England boarding school dances and four extras afterward. Her dance card showed she had partners for seven of the ten, and all four of the extras.

On the preceding November 27 Starr was punished with five demerits for "washing hair in study hour." On December 3 the girl who in 1931 wrote she had "experienced every sensation," who drank herself into hysteria in an effort to escape the dark implications of her past, drew a fine of three demerits from the school council for preferring her couch to breakfast.

Soon. The "memory book," reminder of her school life, for which the man the Faithfulls name helped to pay, gives insight only, except for the travel record, into the sort of routine believed by boarding school mistresses.

AT HARVARD SHOW

Starr's picture appears with the basketball team of 1923, the swimming team, the canoe club. She seemed the jauntiest of the girls, held her head highest. Another picture, a cutout from a year book, shows her with Dorothy Tremble another hockey player.

Her career at Rogers Hall ended in January, 1924. Thereafter, the "memory book" exhibits programs for the Colonial Theater, Boston, play-bills in February and March of the Vanities and the second Music Box Revue.

The "memory book" ceased to interest Starr. Its last item, the program for the Harvard Hasty Pudding Club's 1924 show, "Who's Who," bears the date of June, 1924.

'I Will Be Dead Before You Get This'--Starr

New York, June 17 (AP)—Detectives attempting to solve the Starr Faithfull mystery were told today that six days before the 25-year-old girl's body was found on Long Beach she wrote a letter to a man with whom she is believed to have been in love, declaring:

"When you receive this I will be dead."

No one in authority would say whether they believed this indicated Starr contemplated suicide or had received threats against her life. Dist. Atty. Edwards has been working on the theory someone drowned her, possibly to keep her from talking.

The letter, detectives said, was received in London after her death by Dr. G. Jameson Carr, ship's doctor of the liner Franconia.

JURY AWAITS CARR

Authorities at Mineola, center of the investigation, said today they expected Carr to return from England Friday, in time to tell a grand jury on that day what he knows of the girl.

Other witnesses have said Starr boarded the Franconia before it sailed from New York May 29. She stayed too long and was taken off in a tug when the vessel was going down the harbor.

The taxicab driver said he took her from the ship's pier to her home and that she was intoxicated and hysterical.

In the letter to Carr, dated June 2, Starr apologized for her actions, said she took her own liquor aboard the vessel and drank it too fast, according to excerpts from the missive previously made public.

ON MYSTERY RIDE

Assistant District Attorney Martin W. Littleton was in New York today trying to find a blonde girl, a department store clerk, with whom Starr is reported to have lunched on the day of her disappearance, June 5.

He also was checking on reports that she took a ride in a mysterious "black automobile" several days previously.

A black-hand letter threatening to involve him in the case unless he paid $500 was received today by Harry Stoner, artist.

Stoner said today Miss Faithfull applied to him for a job as model about a month before she disappeared, and that he had not seen her since.

He said he attended the farewel party given for Miriam Hopkins, actress, which Miss Faithfull had said she attended the night before she disappeared. He said he did not see Miss Faithfull and was certain that if she had been there she would have spoken.

New Information Revises Picture of Faithfull Mystery, Reeve Declares

Famed Detective Story Writer Declares the Contradictory Elements Obscure Case

New York, June 17.

Novels, plays and pictures will be written around the Starr Faithfull murder. Not since the famous Hall-Mills case has any mystery united so many of the elements of popular fiction as this.

To particularize, what intrigues me about it is just this little remark that District Attorney Elvin N. Edwards made to me yesterday in his office:

"This case will not be solved until the one fact is in."

REPORT VERIFIED

I said:

"Here's what I came to see you about. I have heard the rumor that Dr. Alexander O. Gettler reports finally that he discovered the sleeping drug, veronal, in her organs. Am I to regard that as authentic after the first published report of no drugs and no alcohol?"

Tearing open a letter, he said:

"Now, let's see. I had it over the telephone. Here is the confirmation. Read that and I will give you a copy of it."

I read until I came to the following:

"There is present in the organs fair amount of veronal. In my opinion the amounts present are not enough to have caused death. They are enough, however, to have caused stupor, or at least semi-stupor."

I said:

The district attorney nodded:

"It means a vital revision of all our pictures. You will notice she was cold sober, no alcohol."

Then he paused and added the remark I quoted first above.

It was not five minutes afterward that, piecing one thing and another together, I was painting a new picture, a picture as it must have been just before the disappearance of Starr that fateful Friday morning, June 5.

BACKGROUND OF CASE

Stanley E. Faithfull, her stepfather, has said in his story, now being published, that the outrage on Starr by a wealthy man was the subject of financial payment about five years ago. Upon further questioning, he places the date of the "outrage" as five years before that. In other words, it was ten years ago, when Starr was only 15.

Now that was before the present Mrs. Faithfull became his wife, when she was still Mrs. Wyman. No attempt at redress of any nature is recorded at that time or by Wyman; nothing until the stepfather came on the scene. Then shortly after his marriage to the former Mrs. Wyman it began, some $20,000 to $25,000 as various ly stated, at first, until today it has been estimated by what appears competent authority to have reached the total of $75,000. That's quite a meal ticket for Starr for five years—an average of $16,000 a year.

CALLED FOR LAWYER

Take another little fact that has just filtered in. Three weeks before the disappearance a telegram was received by Faithfull asking him to telephone at once to Boston. It was from his lawyer, Rowley.

Faithfull telephoned Boston at once. Rowley tossed back the question:

"What have you been doing?"

"What do you mean?"

Rowley amplified, as I have it from the best sources:

"I have information that the whole story is to be exposed in New York. Now what about it?"

That's where my informant stopped, unfortunately. But there is enough in even that to necessitate a radical revision of the picture from another angle also.

The Faithfull family were losing their equity in the Cape Cod property. "Tooka" was "hocking" her coat for money. Starr was writing and telling everybody, even the absent Dr. Carr, that she expected to be in the old playground, London, shortly. It's a picture that does not make sense without money to come when there is no money at present.

Add to that the fact that to all appearances the story of the Starr Faithfull "outrage" as it is being told has all the earmarks of having been prepared long before this present date of publication.

"CUT-OUT PUZZLE

Then try to fit into the mosaic of this cut-out puzzle such other facts as to who it was that taught Starr to be an ether-snuffer, taught her the use of veronal, taught her the use of synthetic gin from her gift silver flask, taught her the philosophy that goes with the psychic-sex writings of Havelock Ellis, taught her the scores of things that stamped her as just a bit unusual even in the "Village." Can you make a picture out of the puzzle—or begin to make it?

Starr comes home Thursday night with a grand story of a studio party at which there were 50 or 60 guests, at which Miriam Hopkins was present, and at which she met two charming chaps, Bruce Winston and Jack Greenaway, and that she is going out with them again Friday night.

Was that story a "plant"? Or was it a planted story?

WAS GIRL PRESENT?

In the latter case it may have been made of whole cloth by the one who told it first. But there was actually a studio party of the nature alleged. It is doubtful whether Starr was present. But it is not at all impossible she may have met somewhere a couple of hilarious guests later who told about it. That would fit the former question—that they story was a "plant."

Who are the mysterious two men, "Bruce" and "Jack"? Where did they come from; inspired by whom? Are they the missing Mr. John Doe and his pal Richard Roe? If so, who is the mysterious Mr. X, who looms in the background?

Just for the sake of the record, yesterday I asked Faithfull:

"What was the last time you saw Starr actually alive"?

Unhesitatingly, he answered:

"What about the taxi driver, Murray Edelman, who says he brought her home intoxicated about 10:30 on that morning?"

DENIES STORY

Faithfull made a vehement denial of the veracity of Edelman.

I asked him another question as to whether there was one of Starr's acquaintances whom he might suspect. He replied:

"That's a leading question."

I pointed out:

"But you can answer it either 'yes' or 'no.'"

He retorted:

"Am I on the witness stand?"

I have gone into these matters with as much brevity as possible because we must first of all motivate the murder of Starr Faithfull. We must get the picture of the situation in which Starr and the whole family found themselves at the time of the murder if we are going to start to eliminate from the list of suspects those unlikely and narrow it down to the most likely. It is with this idea in mind that the district attorney has arranged together the use of synthetic gin to meet me again.

MRS. MENKEN ROBBED OF JEWELS

ARMED THIEVES FORCE HER TO OPEN VAULT

Servants Bound and Gagged by Three Men, Who Escape With Gems Worth $100,000

New York, June 17 (INS)—Mrs. S. Stanwood Menken, wife of the socially prominent attorney, was forced from bed today in her home by three armed men, who made her open a safe at pistol point and stole jewels valued at $100,000.

The three gained entrance to the house by a ruse and bound and gagged four servants before ascending to Mrs. Menken's bedroom on the second floor.

Mrs. Menken was in bed when a man, posing as a florist's messenger, rang the bell.

A maid answered and was signing a receipt book when the man shouldered her aside and stepped through the door, drawing a pistol. Two other men, who had apparently been hiding nearby, ran up the steps and came in.

The maid and three other servants, together with an upholsterer repairing furniture in the Menken home, were threatened with death and then bound with rope. Their mouths were sealed with adhesive tape.

Mrs. Menken, in her bedroom on the second floor, was unaware of what was happening until the three entered her rooms. They threatened her with death and forced her to get up and open a wall safe in which the jewels were kept.

Menken founded the Security League in 1914, and has been much in the news for years.

RUNAWAY WIFE HELD IN THEFT

Cleveland, June 17 (AP)—Mrs. Hazel Partridge, 31, of Templeton, Mass., and two youths with whom, according to police, she ran away from her home, will appear in court here tomorrow to answer theft charges. The boys, neighbors of Mrs. Partridge, are Helge Strom, 22, and Bruno Strom, 18.

They were taken into custody Sunday on complaint of a rooming house proprietress. The charge they stole $10 worth of clothing.

Police said they were told by Joseph A. Partridge, husband of the woman, that she and their children, Marion, 14, and Ernest, 12, left home May 26 in the family automobile with the neighbor boys. They were heading for California when arrested.

Partridge said he was ready to forgive the entire family if they would return home, officials were informed.

M'MILLAN IS TO HOP IN JULY

Commander Donald B. MacMillan, noted Arctic explorer, will hop off from Squantum for Labrador, Greenland, and Iceland early in July.

Plans for a continuation of the flight to England, have been abandoned because of the amount of work required in mapping 3000 square miles of territory in the northland during the summer.

Details of the flight were made public by Commander MacMillan at a conference with the press in the Boston City Club today.

The plane, a seven-passenger Lockheed-Vega, will arrive in Squantum on June 27 piloted by Charles E. Rocheville, navy flier, who flew to within 11 degrees of the North Pole with MacMillan in 1925. He will pilot the plane on the trip to Iceland and back.

Present plans are for a hop from Squantum to Rockland, Me., from there to Nain, northern Labrador, thence to Ivigtut, South Greenland, to Angmagsalik, East Greenland, and thence to Reykjavik, Iceland.

MacMillan will be navigator of the plane and E. J. Newcomb, aerial photographer, will do the mapping. They plan to fly back to Boston, arriving here about Sept. 10.

STARR CASE IS LIKE THAW'S

New York, June 17—Striking similarities in the emotional impulses that may have motivated murder were seen yesterday in the death of Starr Faithfull and the no less celebrated case of the murder of Stanford White.

In each of these cases, it was noted ,the chief element indicating a motive centered in the report that the woman concerned had been betrayed by a man.

THAW CASE CITED

When Harry Thaw was tried for the shooting of White, it was recalled, it brought out that his wife, Evelyn Nesbit, had told him she had been mistreated by White before she married Thaw. Testimony disclosed she made this revelation to her husband after marrying him.

The defense made an important point of this, insisting it did not matter whether this were true or not, but that Thaw, believing it true, had become enraged and was led to commit the homicide.

FEAR AND RAGE.

In the Faithfull case the emotional impulse of rage finds its counterpart in an equally compelling emotional reaction—fear. No jealousy motive enters this case. But the mechanism that Starr was betrayed by a wealthy man several years ago and that this incident, long kept secret, was being talked of widely recently may have struck the man with morbid fear. Such an emotional strain could lead to only one possible relief—have the girl silenced.

In both the Thaw and the Faithfull cases, the reported mistreatment occurred several years before the murder. In each instance the story of the victim was kept secret long time, but the murder took place soon after it was made known to others.

STARR'S 'DEATH LETTER' FOUND

London, June 17—An unnamed man, holding the secret to the fate of Starr Faithfull, whose body was found under mysterious circumstances near New York city, is an exile in the United States, according to this morning's News-Chronicle.

The newspaper understands Starr wrote this man what was probably her last letter, in which she said by the time he had read the contents she would be dead.

The letter was posted in New York after the man's ship sailed, came to England on a fast boat, arriving simultaneously with him.

The News Chronicle says Starr was greatly attached to this man, who is described as the only person who had a good influence over her.

Bruce Winston, British actor, has denied New York reports he had been in the company of Starr on the day before she disappeared.

Winston, who has been playing in "The Land of Smiles" at the Theatre Royal, Drury Lane, was reticent regarding his acquaintance with the girl. He said:

"I returned to London from the United States in March. I saw Starr in New York and knew her also in London."

AGED WOMAN DIES IN FIRE

Gloucester, June 17—Mrs. Clementine Pigeon, 80, of 576 Washington st., Wellesley, an aunt by marriage of Mrs. Elizabeth Pigeon, of the Boston school committee, was burned to death in her summer home at 271 Western ave. shortly before midnight.

Mrs. Pigeon's body was found in a fire place in the living room where she is believed to have fallen after a sick spell. The fire kindled her clothing and spread to furnishings of the house.

In the house at the time was a maid, who had retired for the evening. Awakened by the smoke, she attempted to reach the ground floor, but the fumes were too strong. She climbed to the roof and attracted the attention of a neighbor, who summoned the fire department.

Mrs. Pigeon was the widow of William B. Pigeon, Boston banker. For more than 60 years she has made her summer home in Gloucester, her birthplace. She is survived by two sons.

BELGIAN BEAUTY WINS TITLE

Galveston, Tex., June 17 (AP)—A black-haired Belgian girl, Netta Duchateau, 17, has received the beauty crown of "Miss Universe."

She possessed enough courage to fly an airplane, but she broke down before acclaim that came with her selection in the 12th annual international beauty pageant here.

"Miss Belgium" cannot speak English. Her chaperone said the girl was graduated from high school last year and had obtained a pilot's license.

A stage contract and perhaps a chance at the movies await Miss Duchateau, the first foreign girl to win the pageant title since 1929. She was awarded $2500 and a silver plaque. Miss Anna Lee Patterson of Ludlow, Ky., "Miss United States," the runner-up, received $500.

CLUE SOUGHT IN TRUNKS

Los Angeles, June 17—What became of the two trunks, insured for $10,000, which Henry Goldstein, figuring in the Starr Faithfull murder mystery in New York, shipped last June 5 to Los Angeles early last March?

Police continued today to search for an answer to that question, spurred by inquiries from New York authorities, who are anxious to see if the trunks contain anything that may shed light on the murder.

Goldstein was arrested in New York on complaint of his wife, Mrs. Esther Goldstein, who turned detective after her husband left her in Los Angeles.

Goldstein added a new sensation to the Starr Faithfull case when he told authorities he had once acted as chauffeur when Starr and a well known man, whose name was not made public, had taken a week's motor trip in Europe. This man, he said, was with Starr 24 hours before her body was found in Long Island surf.

HOLIDAY HALTS HIS JAIL TERM

Today meant more than the ordinary holiday to Joseph Delmonte, North End manager of boxers.

He won a day's respite from a one-month sentence at Deer Island because the boat wasn't running on account of the holiday.

Delmonte paid a $15 fine and had a previously suspended sentence of a month invoked after he was found guilty of assault and battery on Hyman Cohen of Balfour st., Roxbury.

In an unusual procedure, he was released on bail of $500 to await the sailing of the Deer Island boat tomorrow.

Cohen told the court he was assaulted by Delmonte following an auto accident last night at Chambers and Brighton sts. West End. Delmonte was a passenger in the car of Charlotte Taylor of Back Bay and objected to Cohen taking her number after Miss Louise Dolan of Brighton st., West End, was struck a glancing blow, Cohen said.

NEW PROTESTS SENT SPAIN

Madrid, June 17 (AP)—The government today received additional protests from Catholic organizations in various parts of Spain against the deportation of Cardinal Pedro Segura y Saenz.

The cabinet of the provisional government, in a statement today, said it ordered the archbishop deported after the Vatican had been asked to remove him and had made no reply.

It said the cardinal was expelled because he was "dangerous to the public safety."

In addition to the religious question the government is occupied with preparations for the election, confused political currents, the Catalan problem, unemployment, criticisms by Communists that the regime is too conservative and reduction and reorganization of the army.

Discussing the religious question in Spain and Italy, the Catholic newspaper El Debate says today the hour has arrived for Catholics throughout the world to unite in defense of the church.

The paper declares that 350,000,000 Catholics in North and South America and Europe can greatly influence the decisions of any government, no matter how bad that government is."

CAPONE GETS READY FOR JAIL

Chicago, June 17—"Scarface" Al Capone, ruler of gangland, today was putting his vast "business affairs" in order and preparing for a change of residence—a prolonged stay in Leavenworth penitentiary.

After more than a decade's insolent defiance of the liquor and income tax laws of the United States, Capone capitulated to the federal government.

Before Judge James H. Wilkerson he pleaded guilty to all the charges against him. In two weeks he will be sentenced.

It is understood that his guilty plea will win him light sentences.

It was agreed among the federal building that Capone would receive a sentence of two and a half years on the liquor conspiracy charges, in which 68 others, mostly his own henchmen, were indicted with him and the same sentence for his failure to declare his income for tax purposes, the sentences to run concurrently.

However, he faces a maximum possible sentence of 54 years, 32 for the income tax law evasions and two in the prohibition conspiracy case, and a $10,000 fine in the latter.

After Capone pleaded guilty United States Dist.-Atty. George E. Q. Johnson, who led the fight against the gangster king, said: "I'll be able to sleep for the first time in a long while tonight. I'll be able to relish a good meal, too."

4 INJURED IN EASTON CRASH

Easton, June 17—Two Dorchester girls were seriously injured and their two companions slightly hurt today when the car they rode in was in collision with a truck here. All were treated by a Brockton physician, after which the girls were taken to Brockton Hospital, where stitches were taken to close wounds in their heads. Later they were taken home.

The more seriously injured were Miss Margaret Donlan, 20, of Spendwell st., Dorchester, whose scalp wounds necessitated 17 stitches, and Miss Katherine Niles, 21, of Lorna rd., Dorchester, whose wounds were closed with 11 stitches.

Leo F. Driscoll of Cedar Grove st. and George Niles of Lorna rd., Dorchester, were slightly injured. The truck with which their auto collided was operated by Raymond F. Leonard of Taunton.

PUNCHARD HELD IN $40,000 BAIL

Lawrence, June 17 (AP)—Ralph A. Punchard, 36, of Salem, pleaded not guilty today to three charges of larceny and one of embezzlement and was ordered held in $40,000 bonds for trial.

Punchard, formerly as assistant cashier of a Salem bank, was charged with taking money from the bank, the Salem Chamber of Commerce and an estate for which he was trustee. He was arrested recently after a long search.

HOOVER CALLS ON NATION TO OBEY LAW

Springfield, Ill., June 17—Standing at the shrine of Abraham Lincoln, President Hoover today summoned the country to rededicate itself to law obedience and law enforcement.

"The six decades which have passed since Lincoln's death," he declared, "have written on the scroll of history changes that are bewildering in their variety. They have broadened and enriched life beyond the imaginations of Lincoln's contemporaries. The years have not only yielded rich treasurers, material and spiritual, but they have brought challenges to readjustment, both by government and by individuals, to a changing world. Our country has become powerful among nations. It is charged with infinitely new responsibilities both at home and abroad.

OBEDIENCE TO LAW

"What a quest has called the endless adventure, the government of men, discloses new and challenging human needs from generation to generation. As we scan our history even since his day, who can doubt Lincoln's words that our national heritage is 'worth the keeping'?

"And it was Lincoln who stated and restated in impressive terms that its keeping rests upon obedience and enforcement of law. There can be no man in our country who, either by his position or his influence, stands above the law. That the republic cannot admit and live. For ours is a government of laws and a society of ordered liberty, safeguarded only by law."

NO CHANGE IN TRUTH

But even though times have changed, he added, there has been no change in "the eternal principles of truth, justice and right, never more clearly stated than by Lincoln.

"They remain," he said, "the solvent for problems and perplexities of every age and of our day."

President Hoover confessed to being handicapped in speaking today of the great emancipator. Everything, he observed, has already been said of Lincoln.

"Nothing we may do can add to his stature in history," he observed. "All that words can convey have long since been uttered by his grateful countrymen.

"A nation in its whole life time flowers with but a few whose names remain on the roll of the world in after generations. Lincoln after all these years still grows, not only in the hearts of his countrymen, but in the hearts of the peoples of the world."

TALKS TO LEGISLATURE.

The President's dedication of the Lincoln tomb was the concluding act of his four-day tour of the Middle West. He reached Springfield early this morning and spent the hours that preceded his speech in conferring with Illinois Republicans, now here attending the session of the General Assembly. His host today was Governor L. L. Emerson, with whom he lunched at the executive mansion after attending a joint session of the General Assembly, to which he spoke of the duties of state governments and warned that "our machinery of

2 YOUTHS FOIL GIRL'S SUICIDE

Two West End youths today frustrated what police say was an attempt at suicide in the Charles River, near the Union Boat Club dock, when they plunged into the river and rescued Miss Terry Murphy, 28, of West Springfield st., South End.

Miss Murphy, who gave her name at first as Rose Weinberg, was taken to the Haymarket Relief Station for treatment, and later released. On her discharge from the hospital she said her attempt at self-destruction had been "rash and foolish," but refused to say what prompted it.

Bruening Moves to Revise Reparations

Berlin, June 17 (AP)—Chancellor Bruening will confer next week with the German ambassadors to Washington, London, Rome and Paris on the best method of getting under way negotiations for revision of reparations.

WOMAN FOUND STRANGLED

Fall River, June 17—A missing pair of shoes furnished police a mystery today in their investigation of the death by strangulation of Marie Anne Gauthier, 44, housekeeper for William McBride, a mill worker.

Mrs. Gauthier was found strangled by a rope, her body between two mattresses in the McBride home on Wade st.

McBride's shoes were missing and an old discarded pair were put in their place. Nothing else was missed from the house.

Medical Examiner Frederick R. Bannes pronounced death due to strangulation, but could not render a decision of murder or suicide.

McBride told police the shoes, found under a quilt in another room, did not belong to him. He later reported a pair of his were missing.

Mrs. Gauthier was last seen yesterday morning when she returned from church. She had left the house with McBride at an early hour to attend services and McBride continued on to work.

She entered the house on her return with the aid of a 17-year-old boy, who climbed in a window for her when she found she had forgotten her key.

The body was found last night when McBride returned from work. It was lying face down, the rope pulled twice around the neck, but not tied.

Milady's Garb for Autumn Long and Made of Velvet

New York, June 17 (AP)—Fall marched into the city today with the showing of advance costumes at the fashion revue sponsored by the League of Advertising Women of New York for women delegates to the convention of the Advertising Federation of America.

Velvets—dull, corded, chiffon, transparent, and cotton—lead as a fall dress fabric. Wools are the chosen materials for all other costumes.

Black will be the smartest color, with the rust shades and browns close seconds. White still is the chosen color for evening, with black, flame, guardsman blue and the pastel shades strong competitors.

Street dresses will come to about eight inches from the floor.

2 WIDOWS DIE ON GALLOWS

Budapest, June 17 (AP)—Two self-made widows were hanged at dawn today in the prison at Szolnok for the murder of their husbands. It was the first double execution of women in Hungary.

Frau Laudislaus Szabo went to her death at 6 a. m. and Frau Balint Csordas followed 30 minutes later.

6000-MILE RACE FOR DIVORCE

Reno, Nev., June 17 (AP)—Climaxing a mother's 6000-mile dash from Antibes, near Nice, France, to Nevada, a divorce contest centering on the custody of 15-month-old Louis Loyson, was begun in the Reno courts today and may furnish a test of the relative merits of Paris and Reno decrees.

The child, given into the custody of the French father, Jean N. Loyson, who got a Paris decree, was whisked away from France by the wealthy mother, Dorothy Dozier Loyson of Denver, who filed suit here April 18, charging cruelty and non-support.

The Paris decree obtained by Loyson, an author and playwright, does not become final until next January, and therefore the order of the French courts awarding him the child apparently is not yet in force.

STARR FAITHFULL'S LIFE STORY

By L. E. LAVEY

CHAPTER SIX

In the murky half-light of a Greenwich Village retreat of the self-styled Intelligentsia muted sizzling instruments wailed through a babel of pointless chatter and high-pitched laughter.

The sickly rays of guttering candles threw their wavering light on the wierdly assorted faces of Bohemia. Sinister faces—vacuous faces—beautiful faces—evil faces—faces that belonged to the night.

Bohemia held high carnival. Someone was giving a party. Who? What difference? There was another excuse for ribaldry. There was another opportunity for license.

Through the dead stillness that followed, beautiful painted lips, distorted in maniacal rage, shrieked vituperations.

At the end of a final wild crescendo of invective, a report like the crack of a whip rang through the stillness.

BLUE EYES BLAZE

A red-haired girl, hate-blazing from her blue eyes, watched his stumbling exit, then sank back in her chair and pillowed her face in her arms.

Starr Faithfull had concluded her first Greenwich Village affair of the heart. Now, the exhilaration of drunkenness past, she drooped into oblivion.

They gathered around her, the gang of wasters with whom she aroused the nights away, and revived her. It was, they assured her, the young fool's own fault. He had dared to interfere with her self-expression. There was nothing in the rules which governed their emancipated world which permitted of the slightest encroachment on the supreme right of individualism.

As for the boy Starr drove from her with a contemptuous slap—the impressionable young painter she had accepted, as a matter of convenience, as her partner in the humorous revels of the village.

It happened that he loved her, and in the blindness of his love, he sought to stem the current that was carrying her to her destruction. He protested against her incessant drinking.

He was banished. He never came back.

Their association began casually. It ended violently. So began, and so ended, a long succession of such affairs.

MIXTURE OF MOODS

Starr, strange mixture of moodiness and cold calculation, took men to suit her purposes. Those purposes served, they became nuisances. She discarded them and turned, without a twinge of regret, to their successors.

Of the long succession of men to whom she gave her love, only one defeated her in the battle of the sexes. From the rest she took what she needed at the moment and cut them adrift.

There was that about her—even beyond her exotic physical beauty—that furnished a plethora of candidates for the frequently vacated post of cavalier. Something—some intangible beauty of spirit, understood least of all by herself—brought to her feet ever-growing crowds of devotees.

From among them she chose deliberately—picked with the calculating eye of the dealer in affections—the man who could best further her interests.

She was yet to encounter the devastating love, which erupted the flaming volcano of her passions—the madness of infatuation which once aroused, ruled her until her mysterious death.

Walker's Detractor Punished by Club

New York, June 17 (AP)—Alan Fox, who as chairman of the City Affairs Committee of the National Republican Club criticized Mayor Walker's private life, found himself out in the cold today as the new committee lists of the club were made public.

Maj.-Gen. James G. Harbord, president of the club, replaced Fox with Kenneth M. Spence as head of the City Affairs Committee. Fox was not appointed to any committee.

Mother and Son Slain by Madman

Newark, N. J., June 17 (INS)—Mrs. Katherine Fuchs, 70, and Frederick C. Glosskiaus, 45, a son by her first marriage, were stabbed to death in their home here today by Theodore Ferraccio, 29, a demented neighbor.

"They were devils and I had to kill them," Ferraccio calmly told police.

look.' I looked again and saw a form."

Galvin said he jumped from the car and ran to the body of the nurse.

He had taken his flashlight from home, he said, and he flashed it on her face there in the darkness.

"I looked at her probably 10 to 15 seconds. I saw instinctively, that she was dead. I turned and looked at Hathaway sitting in the car and I shouted, 'She's dead.' Hathaway said, 'I know it.'

"I said, what are you going to do about it?' and he said, 'nothing, let's get out of here.'"

He said:

"No. I'm going to beat it." He started to race the motor, and I ran over to the car as fast as I could to get in."

Galvin said he tried to get Hathaway to help him lift the body of the girl into the car to take it to Fall River and that Hathaway refused.

Hathaway, he said, speeded up the motor of the car and afraid that he would drive away and leave him there alone, Galvin ran and leaped in.

"I thought possibly he would go and I'd be left there," he said. "I flashed the light on his face and told him I was going to take him to the police."

They backed the car from the lane, he said. Galvin asked Hathaway if he intended to leave the body of his girl friend there.

"Someone will find her in the morning," he quoted the playboy as replying. "People around here get up early."

Galvin said he asked: "Look here, Hathaway, what's this all about" and that Hathaway replied that they had an argument when Verna told him she was engaged to an interne and that he had hit her.

Galvin, who once played Damon to Hathaway's Pythias—"Jasper" and "Pinky" they called each other —took the witness stand at the start of the afternoon session of the eighth day of trial.

FIRST MEETING

He faced Hathaway for the first time since they parted in the darkness that night nearly three months ago, when they drove from Fall River into Rhode Island to see the body.

Hathaway, during his testimony, showed absolutely no emotion, calm, head resting on one hand, elbow on the chair back, he watched the witness.

Galvin stepped briskly to the witness stand, a short, young man with a thin face. He is an insurance broker in Fall River.

He went to school with "Pinky," played basketball with him. Pals for 12 years.

Police Chief George W. Potter, of Tiverton, testified earlier to finding Verna R. Russell's missing teeth in Winward lane, a short distance from where her body was found on March 23.

He went directly to the spot and picked them up 38 hours after the body was discovered and state troopers had made a search, he said. He walked up the lane and there they were. He didn't need to get down on his hands and knees and he didn't wear his glasses. He was in the lane alone.

The state's case against Elliot R. Hathaway, 28, Fall River playboy, son of a Massachusetts legislator, charged with murdering the student nurse, moved swiftly during the morning session toward the dramatic episode expected when Vernon V. Galvin, Hathaway's pal, takes the stand.

PLAYBOY UNMOVED

The testimony of three witnesses, given before Judge Charles A. Walsh and jury in a hushed, crowded courtroom, was completed, paving the way for Galvin's story of his visit with Hathaway to the death scene.

Hathaway again sat unmoved through another demonstration of the strangler's grip and exhibit of photographs and teeth of the girl friend he is alleged to have throttled.

During the trial which entered its eighth day today, the largest line of would-be spectators thus far formed outside the courthouse starting before 7 o'clock this morning and those who failed to gain admittance for the morning session remained in line in the hope of better luck this afternoon.

Hathaway's entire family and the father of the victim again were present in court.

Witnesses were former State Troopers George A. Grasmiger, Charles A. Hambly, Newport undertaker, and the probationary chief of the Tiverton police.

Grasmiger told of Galvin's movements at the death scene after he had directed the trooper to the body and of taking him to the home of Albert G. Winward, nearby, for coffee.

DEATH GRIP SHOWN

He said he saw Drs. Charles M. Bryant and Emlin D. Peasley make this test and that he applied it himself, finding that thumb and fingers fitted on the marks.

Dr. Frederick R. Barnes, medical examiner of Fall River, Mass. was subpoenaed by the Hathaway defense, in a surprise move, just before the morning session got underway.

A second surprise at the trial was an attempt—but unsuccessful—by defense counsel to secure a postponement, through a motion calling on the State to turn over the dead girl's vital organs, including the heart.

Granting of the motion would have meant a second exhumation of the body and a postponement and delay of at least five days, this length of time being required for defense medical experts from Tufts College and Brown University to examine the organs.

With the jury excused from the courtroom, the motion was argued, and then denied.

Dr. Barnes, on whom the summons was served today, is a trustee of Truesdale Hospital, Fall River, where Verna Russell was a student nurse.

When the afternoon session opened, McLyman arose and called Vernon Galvin.

Hathaway, the defendant, leaned forward at the counsel table, took a handkerchief from his pocket, and mopped his forehead. Galvin entered the courtroom from a rear door and walked across to the witness stand. As he held his right hand up to be sworn, he glanced at Hathaway, but the defendant's head was turned. Galvin sat down.

Q. Do you know Elliot Hathaway? Ans. For 12 years.

Q. Did you go to high school with him? A. Yes.

Q. Did you see him on the evening of March 23, last? A—Yes, sir.

Q—Previous to that date, when was the last you saw him? A.—March 19, at one in the afternoon.

TELLS OF MEETING

Q—Where did you meet Hathaway on March 19 A—In the center of Fall River.

Q—Were you going for an automobile ride? A—Yes. I was going to borrow an automobile and I asked him to come along.

Q—Where did you go first? A.—To the rooms of the Republican City Club on Second st.

Q—What happened there? A.—The defendant telephoned.

Q—Who did he call? A—He asked for Miss Russell.

Q—After the call, what happened? A—We went down to the place where I was going to borrow the car; we waited around more than an hour, then went to the theater.

Hathaway stared at his former chum and bit his fingernails. The jury was looking intently at the witness.

Q—After you left the theater did he say anything about the telephone call he had? A.—Yes, he said he had a date with the girl for the following Monday night.

Q—When did you next see him? A—Monday night, at 7:45, at my home.

Q—What time did you get home that night?

CALLS ON GALVIN

A—About 7:15. I was eating supper with my mother and wife. The defendant came to the door and I let him in. I asked him to sit down. We talked about 10 minutes. He said "I've got a date, but I don't want to be too early." I said: "Oh, I remember the date you made." He said he was going to a restaurant in Providence. He said he was going to a hospital, the Truesdale Hospital.

Q—Did he have a car with him? A—Yes.

Q—Did he say anything when he was leaving? A.—Yes, he said he had to be home early, but said he would drop in if he had any liquor and we'd have a couple of drinks.

Q—Did you leave your home any time after that up to 11? A.—No.

Q—What did you do during the evening? A—I worked on my insurance books. Then I played checkers with my wife.

Q—What did you do after that? A—I turned on the radio at 10 o'clock. There was a mystery drama on. It was a Sherlock Holmes story.

Q—Who were the characters? A—Sherlock Holmes and his colleague, Watson; a girl, and the superintendent of a boys' school. It lasted about 30 minutes. Galvin told the story of the drama in detail.

Q—What did you do then? A—We prepared for bed, my mother brought in some tea and cake of some sort. We retired about 10:55.

Q—Did you have a caller later? A—Yes. At 11:15.

Q—Who was it? A—The defendant.

Galvin at no time during his testimony used the name of Hathaway. He referred to him as "the defendant" or "he."

Q—Do you mean Elliot Hathaway? A—Yes.

Q—Did you hear him coming?

A—No, my wife heard the car and said: "That must be Pinky." I heard the bell ring and the dog set up a howl. I put on my bathrobe and slippers, took the flashlight with me and opened the door. The defendant was standing there.

Q—How was he dressed? A—A gray suit, a raccoon coat, a red tie and a brown felt hat.

Q—Did he have anything in his hand when he came in? A—He had a gin bottle. We went into the parlor and he said, "What do you think happened?" He asked me that two or three times, tapping me on the chest. I said: "I don't know, what happened?"

GIRL IS DEAD

He said: "Two holdup men held up me and the girl in Stafford rd." I looked at him, and then looked at the bottle. I said: "Come on, sit down." A few minutes later, my mother came into the parlor, and he told her the same story. He took off his coat, and put the bottle on the table. It was about one-quarter full.

"I went into my wife's room and when I came back he was still talking to my mother about the holdup. He said that two men came up to the car, ordered him and the girl out, then one of the men grabbed her by the throat, and she began to scream.

One of the men hit her then, he said, and she fell down. He told me that the other man stuck his gun in his ribs and said to him, 'If you know what's best for you, you'll beat it.'

Q—What did you say about that? A—I told my mother I'd give him the third degree. I got up and leaned down close to him, putting my hands on the arms of his chair. I asked him six or seven questions about where it happened, when, what the men looked like, and things like that.

"He said he didn't get a very good look at their faces, but thought they were Bravas, about 30 years old. I asked him why he didn't look for help, he said he was too excited and that it happened only about 30 minutes before he got to my house.

Q—How long did he stay there? A—About an hour an ten minutes.

Q. What was he doing? A. He continued to talk about the holdup, adding colorful details.

Finally he said:

"I'm in a jam, and I'm going to beat it" My mother said: "You threatened to run that before, but you've never done it." Then he said: "Well, the girl is dead."

Hathaway's eyes never left the face of the witness. Judge Walsh also followed him closely. The eyes of every juror were fastened upon Galvin.

Galvin continued: "He asked me if I'd come to see him if he went to the Big House, and he asked me if I'd bring him cigars when he was up there. I said, 'Yes, I'll bring you cigars, cigarettes, and chewing gum.' I was laughing, I thought it was all a joke.

Q. Was that the impression it made upon you? A. Yes.

Q—What did he say about leaving? A—Oh, he asked my mother if he could stay all night. She said "yes." He said, "Well I've got to put the car up at the house. Some member of the family might want to use it in the morning." He said he'd sleep in a chair when he came back, and he asked my mother if I could go with him to put up the car. My mother insisted that I stay in, that I had a cold.

Q—Did he make any signs to you to leave? A—Yes. He touched my foot with his foot and made a gesture with his hand to come on out. My mother finally agreed. I wasn't dressed to go out. I put on some clothes over my pajamas. I don't know who suggested wearing his coat, the raccoon coat, but I put it on and he wore mine.

Q—So you started out to put up the car at Hathaway's home? A—Yes.

TO DEATH SCENE

Q—When was that plan changed? A—After we got into the car, he said: "Let's go and have a few drinks." I said: "You had enough." He said: "Let's go and sit down some place where we can drink." So we went up to Mayo's place, and got a fifth of gin, Booth's High and Dry. I gave Mayes $2.00.

Q—What did you do then? A—We started south on Robeson st. He was driving. We started up Belmont st. from my house, the defendant asked me if I knew where I was going. I said: "Sure, to put up the car." He said: "No, no. We're going to Stafford rd., to see if that girl is out there." I said: "You know she isn't there. She's at the hospital." He insisted that she was still there, in Stafford rd. We drove along, across the state line. I recognized two gas stations, and I realized we were some distance from home. I said: "Where are you going?" He replied: "Just up her a little way."

KNEW GIRL WAS DEAD

Q—Did he stop finally? A—Yes; he turned into Winward lane and drove in about 5 0yards.

Q—Did the jury what took place then. A—He stopped the car and left the motor running. He pointed through the window, across the lane, down to Stafford rd., back to the lunch cart, and then back to your house, did Hathaway say anything further about the holdupy A.—No sir, he didn't.

Q.—You mentioned that at the time you put the flashlight on Miss Russell's face there was some conversationv A—Yes.

Q—Tell us what it was. A.—I said: "She is dead." He said, "I know it." That's all.

Galvin taken in cross-exam by Atty. Hurley.

Q—How did Mr. Hathaway look when you saw him? A—When do you mean?

Q—When he arrived at your house? A—He appeared normal.

Q—Was there anything peculiar about him? A—No.

Q—Did he have anything to drink with him when he came at 7:30? A.—No, but he said he might get something to drink.

Q—What did he say? A—He said. "I think I'll get some liquor."

PHONED NURSE

Q—Now, when you met Hathaway on March 19, where did you go? A—To the Republican City Club.

Q—What did he say? A.—He said he had a phone call to make.

Q—Did he make it? A—Yes, He did.

Q—Could you hear all of what he said? A—No, not all of it.

Q—What did you hear? A—I heard him call for Miss Russell, and he talked with her, and made the date, and asked her if it was O. K. to come up to the hospital.

Q—And you didn't see him again until the next Monday? A.—That's right.

Q—On Monday, March 23, he dropped in to see you?

A—Yes.

Q—When you told him to go, did he go? A—No.

Q—Did he tell you where he was going? A—Yes, he did.

Q—Where did he say he was going? A—To see Miss Russell.

Q—And you say he mentioned that he had to be home early. A.—Yes, he said he had to have the car home early.

Q—You said he mentioned that he might take a ride to Providence. A.—Yes.

BACK AT 11:15

Q—You didn't see Hathaway again until 11:15? A—That's right.

Q—When he came back, did he preside.

PLAYBOY LEAVES

Galvin testified that he and Hathaway stopped outside a luncheon min Fall River, but that Hathaway refused to enter and that he finally got back into the car, and Hathaway drove him to his home. They arrived there about 1:20 he said, and both told the story of the finding of the body to Galvin's mother. He said that Hathaway remained only a few minutes after that and said, in parting: 'You know where to go."

Galvin went on: I said to him. 'You'd better go to your father or the police station."

Galvin said that he went to his wife's room, and talked with her until 1:45, when they both rode to Hathaway's home. They rang the bell, he said, and were admitted by Mrs. Hathaway. She escorted them upstairs, she said, where they talked with Mr. Hathaway for about a half hour.

Q.—What time was that, when you got to the Hathaway home? A.—2:15.

Q.—How do you place the time? A.—There was a clock on the Durfee high school. It was illuminated, on the tower.

STARES AT WITNESS

The defendant was leaning way over to one side, his chin tucked in his hand, and staring at Galvin.

Galvin testified that after leaving the Hathaway home he and his wife took a taxicab to their home. He said they did not go to bed, but remained talking with his mother about the finding of the body until 4:30, when he and his wife left the house again and went to the Mellen Hotel.

Q—What did you do there? A—I phoned the Truesdale Hospital.

Q—Why? A—I hoped that I was mistaken when I looked at that girl, and I thought it would be unfair to her if I went to the police station with the story, if she was not dead. There was a long delay getting information at the hospital, so I hung up and went to the police station. I got there about 5, and told them the story. A state police officer came over from Portsmouth, and after a while I went with him back to Winward lane. He found the body while I was looking in another part of the ditch.

Q.—During the time that you left your house, and went to Tiverton until you returned to your house, you were wearing his coat? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did you notice, when you got into his car, what condition the right front seat was in? A.—No, I didn't notice.

Q.—Did you notice whether the seat was tipped up or not? A.—No, I didn't.

PLAYBOY QUIET

Q.—From the time you left your house at 12 o'clock on your way to ask you to go somewhere with him? A—Yes.

Q.—How soon was that? A—About an hour later.

Q. Was there any objection to your going with him? A. Yes.

Q. Who objected? A. My wife and my mother.

Those objections were made when they found that he wanted you to go out with him? A. Yes, when he asked my mother to let me go.

Q— Now you tell say that the first time you heard him suggest about your going with him was an hour after he came? A—Yes.

Q—You don't remember the suggestion having been made sooner? A—No, he didn't say anything about it.

Q—You have difficulty hearing, don't you? A—Slightly.

Howe Says River 'Thread' Is Boundary

Atty. Dewitt C. Howe, special counsel for the State of New Hampshire, today argued in Federal Court before a master the contention of New Hampshire in the boundary line dispute with Vermont. He contended that the true boundary line between the states is the "thread" of the Connecticut river, and not one of its shores.

DELICIOUS AMERICAN COOKERY

Tempting! Thoroughly good! American Cookery, created by French chefs who make every dish appetizing and tasty . . . who use only the freshest choices produce obtainable, and combine them according to modern dietetic practice.

Main Dining Room: There's a restful atmosphere of old world leisure, and spring time coolness in this charming, high ceilinged Spanish restaurant. The service is a la carte at all meals. Music every night at dinner.

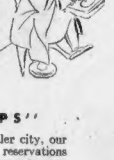
Café Rouge: In this gaily decorated room, you're almost certain to meet some of your friends. Come and try our popular "Plate" combinations — at luncheon they are from 65c; at dinner from 85c.

Lunch Room: The counter service is quick and efficient. And Statler chefs prepare the food. Need more be said?

Sandwich Shop: Drop into this little restaurant any week-day, when you want light breakfasts, luncheons or soda-fountain specialties. Simplified self-service.

Outside Catering: Statler food and service are available outside the hotel, in your home—or for your club. Telephone our maitre d'hotel, Mr. Allman, at Hancock 2000. He will gladly give you complete information about this helpful service.

A FRIENDLY BARBER • SHOP •

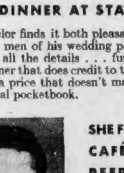


Visit our immaculate, well-equipped Barber Shop on the floor below lobby; you'll want to come again. For you'll get excellent work by master barbers. And everyone is devoted to giving better service — not to getting bigger checks.

QUIET, COMFORTABLE CONFERENCE ROOMS

Hold your next meeting in one of the Statler private business rooms — away from office distractions and annoying interruptions. All the rooms are equipped with voice amplifiers, and can be furnished with comfortable arm chairs. And all adjoin private dining rooms. Call Hancock 2000 and ask for Mr. Bristol. He will tell you how useful these facilities can be to you — whether your meeting numbers 5 or 1,500.

WELCOME "HELPS"



Travel: If you're going to a Statler city, our assistant manager will gladly make reservations for you at our hotel there. And wherever your destination, our Transportation Desk will get your train, pullman, boat or airplane tickets. Just phone them. Entertainment: Call our "theater ticket" booth, when you want good seats for a show, or athletic events.

THRONGS JOIN BUNKER HILL DAY FETE

A big parade free ice cream and candy for children, games, band concerts and "open house" in all clubhouses and many private residences, featured today's observance of the anniversary of the Battle of Bunker Hill.

BIG MILITARY PARADE

The line included soldiers, sailors and marines, Civil War veterans, Spanish-American and World War veterans, school cadets, members of the present fire department and the old time departments, members of the honorary committee on the Bunker Hill Day celebration.

Mayor Curley, members of the Legislature and Boston City Council, invited guests of the city, and Andrew J. Carson, medal of honor man, rode in the parade.

Governor Ely had planned to attend Charlestown's celebration but the serious illness of his mother-in-law, Mrs. Emily J. Dyson, at Westfield, made it impossible to be present. He sent the committee in charge his regrets.

The boys' running races on the monument grounds, scheduled to open the celebration at 9:30, and the doll carriage and "horribles" parade for girls set for 9 o'clock, were delayed by rain.

The weather, however, had no effect on the promised distribution of 10,000 boxes of ice cream and 10,000 lollypops which awaited the children at Charlestown High School in Monument sq. at 10 o'clock.

MARATHON IS HELD

In Fay Square, at the junction of Medford, Bunker Hill and Main sts., the three-mile James M. Curley Marathon, under the direction of Edward Morey, was started by Jimmy Henigan, winner of the Fifty Day Marathon.

A. Meilini, running under the colors of the Somerset A. C., won a gold watch, awarded to the first Charlestown boy who finished.

Swimmers held forth at Dewey Beach, off Medford st., at 12:30 o'clock. Chairman James Lynch secured a long list of entries. There was an exhibition of fancy diving and swimming by the Boston Swimming Club girls, under the direction of Bro. Levins. Dennis Swanson assisted Chairman Lynch in conducting these events.

Following the parade, the National Equal Rights League were to hold exercises on the Bunker Hill Monument Grounds in honor of the colored soldiers who fought in the Battle of Bunker Hill. At 3:30 p. m. at the Barry Playground, the baseball game for the City of Boston prize was to be held.

BAND CONCERTS

Band concerts at the various parks and playgrounds in the district will bring the celebration to a close in the evening.

Sullivan sq. playground was transformed into a midway, with flying horses, ferris wheels, side shows, and was the Mecca for a large crowd last night and today.

City Councillor Thomas H. Green is honorary chairman of the celebration committee, and Charles Castop of Charlestown, is director of the celebration. James W. Donovan has acted as secretary to the committee and Philip McMahon, as treasurer. Chief Marshal Joseph F. Stoddard of the parade has arranged the roster of the parade, one of the best held in the Bunker Hill district.

NIGHT BEFORE FEASTS

The celebration was ushered in last night with four great banquets. Leading in these was the Municipal Banquet in Charlestown Armory on Bunker Hill st. Prof. Daniel W. O'Donoghue of Georgetown University, and Mayor Curley were the principal speakers.

Maj.-Gen. Smedley D. Butler, U. S. M. C., was the chief speaker at the Bunker Hill Post, American Legion, banquet at Jordan Memorial hall, while Cong. Hamilton Fish, Jr., of New York, delivered the address at the banquet of Bunker Hill Council, K. of C., held in the hall on High st.

MAYOR BUSY

State Treasurer Charles F. Hurley was the principal speaker at the fourth banquet, that of the St. Mary's Women's Club, held in the club hall at 5 Monument sq.

Mayor Curley put in a busy evening. In addition to speaking at the municipal banquet, he also appeared at the dinners of the K. of C. and the Women's Club and spoke briefly.

Fireworks Claim Three Victims in Charlestown

Three Charlestown fireworks victims were recovering today from the results of pranks among celebrators of Bunker Hill Day.

All were victims of torpedo throwers, who caused injuries that required treatment in Haymarket Relief Station.

Dennis Mainey, 12, of Stone st., Charlestown, nearly lost an eye and suffered burns on the cheek when a small boy threw one at him.

The other victim was Robert Russell, 8, of Polk st., Charlestown, a victim of powder burns and stone abrasions when a torpdo hit him on the neck.

Mother and Child Die in Cloudburst

Drumheller, Alta., June 17 (AP)—A cloudburst at the town of Wayne last night swept away a house in which a mother and her 12-year-old son were living, flooded a mine and undermined roads and filled basements.

The deluge carried away the home of James Graham. His wife and son believed to have been in the building, were not seen again.

Communist Lynched in Mexican Church

Mexico City, June 17 (INS)—Infuriated worshippers today lynched an unidentified German Communist for making an anti-religious address from the pulpit of a church in Morelia, according to a report received here. The Communist was strung to a church beam, men, women and children taking part in the lynching.

King and Queen Set Date for Royal Ball

London, June 17 (AP)—The king and queen have chosen July 16 as the date for the ball they will give in Buckingham Palace, the first function of the king to be held there in seven years.

Officials were busy today with the details of the ball. It still was undecided whether male guests would wear uniforms. In case uniforms are not worn men will appear in evening clothes with knee breeches.

Mellon in Hour's Talk With M'Donald

London, June 17 (AP)—Andrew W. Mellon, American Secretary of the Treasury, and Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald, spent an hour in private conversation today as MacDonald's quiet office in the House of Commons. Mellon said he had nothing to say for publication. MacDonald also declined to discuss their meeting.

Smoke a fresh cigarette

Have you tried CAMELS?

The steady increase in the sales of Camel cigarettes proves one fact beyond a doubt.

If we can persuade you to switch to Camels for just one day, the odds are very great that you will adopt these cigarettes as your personal brand.

So great is the contrast between the delights of perfectly conditioned Camels fresh from the protection of the new Humidor Pack and the harsh, hot smoke from stale dried-out cigarettes, that your decision will be immediate.

The quality is there in the first place, for Camels are a blend of choice Turkish and mellow Domestic tobaccos.

In factory-prime condition, with their rare flavor and their natural moisture still intact, they are a joy to the smoker.

Now this flavor is air-sealed in by an outer wrapping of moisture-proof Cellophane, so that no matter where you buy Camels, in any land, in any climate, you are always certain to get fresh cigarettes in factory-prime condition.

And there are other advantages as well. For the Humidor Pack also protects the cigarettes within from dust and germs and weather conditions.

Start the day on Camels. See how much milder they are, how much more flavorful they are, how cool they are to your throat.

No peppery dust to irritate delicate membrane. No harsh, hot smoke from dried-out tobacco to burn the tongue or sear the throat.

Come, switch to Camels for a day, then leave them —if you can.

It is the mark of a considerate hostess, by means of the Humidor Pack, to "Serve a fresh cigarette." Buy Camels by the carton — this cigarette will remain fresh in your home and office

IN THE LIMELIGHT TODAY IS ELEANOR FITZGERALD, granddaughter of the well-known art connoisseur, the late Desmond Fitzgerald of Brookline, whose miniature art museum was left as a memorial to him. Miss Fitzgerald was married yesterday in New York to Albert Franke, and many Bostonians in the fashionable world went over to attend. Among the guests were Mr. and Mrs. John Nichols Brown. The young couple have sailed for Europe.

Pretty Barbara Greenough, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Robert Greenough of Brookline, seems to be breathing the air of misfortune this season. She has been a student at Vassar and was to have graduated with her class this year, but owing to illness she was obliged to leave college recently and return to her home, an operation later being necessary. Mighty tough luck for a young and beautiful girl. She attended Miss Winsor's School and came out in the season of 1927-28 and was elected to the Vincent Club and Junior League. We understand she will return to complete her course at Vassar next term. Plucky?

New Summer Home for Whitwells

OSTERVILLE, ON CAPE COD, WILL NOT HAVE THE genial Frederick Whitwells in their midst this summer. They have rented their summer house at that pleasure resort and we hear were going farther down the Cape. Mrs. Whitwell has always been interested in Le Cercle la Francaise and goes abroad each summer to spend some time in France. A perfect fascinator, she has always been the recipient of much devotion from a number of admirers—not the kind that requires forfeits and pledges—but just the attraction of an interesting personality. And speaking of far down on the Cape, we heard with regret today of the death of Richard Simpkins, brother of Mrs. Bayard Thayer, suddenly at his summer place, Punkycott, near Barnstable. He resided at the Somerset Club when in town.

THE SEQUEL TO THE Charles Merriam wedding is about to be revealed. You will remember what a furore there was in social circles about five years ago when the handsome Harvard freshie son of Mrs. Ralph Gray married a model from a downtown department store. He took his bride to the West and at least some of us hoped is would be a case of living happily ever afterward. But it seems that rich or poor, marriage is not the perfect solution to some romances, and word comes that Charles and his working-girl are getting their divorce in Mexico. Mr. and Mrs. Gray are going to leave soon for that remote place to spend the summer with their son.

AND ANOTHER BLIGHTED romance, which we hear will have a happy ending, is that of Moseley Taylor, son of Mr. and Mrs. William O. Taylor, whose marriage a few years ago to Natalie Pope of San Francisco was an important social event. However, shortly after the baby arrived, Mrs. Taylor decided to go home to mother and take the baby with her and in a short time a divorce was in progress, which becomes final this week. The next Mrs. Moseley Taylor will have been a private secretary in a State st. brokerage office, 'tis rumored. Perhaps Moseley will now take up aviation again and live his own life as he wishes to.

Luncheons and Dinners for Guests

At the annual meeting of the Eastern Horse Club a short time ago Augustus F. Goodwin was re-elected president for the third consecutive year, so when the meet starts today we know that everything will be run off as smoothly as always in the past. Bayard Tuckerman is again vice-president and chairman of the stewards, and John R. Macomber, owner of the beautiful estate, Raceland, where the third day's program of the race will be held, is chairman of the board of governors.

Luncheons Planned

There is always a good deal of entertaining during race week, part of it being done this year by Mr. and Mrs. George Saltonstall Wes; at a luncheon at their home in Chestnut Hill today for many of their friends, and part by Mrs. Charles Goddard Weld, who will have a luncheon on Saturday. Friday evening Henry G. Vaughan, M. F. H. of the Norfolk Hunt, and Richard Ely Danielson, M. F. H. of the Groton Hunt, will be hosts at a dinner for all the gentlemen jockeys at the Tavern Club. And on Saturday evening the Eastern Horse Club holds its dinner at The Country Club for the stewards and all other officers.

The four races with the most sought after winners are the Challenge Cup, The Country Club Grand Annual, The Chamblet Memorial and the National Hunt Cup. They have all drawn a great many entries, some new, some old with a lap on one of the coveted prizes, as for instance Mr. and Mrs. Sumner Pingree with entries from their famous stables "Flying Horse Farm," Miss Dorothy Neyhart with "Iolian," Mr. Goodwin with "Landboy," and many others.

Box Holders

Box holders are many, a few of them being: Mrs. Charles Sumner Bird, Mrs. Richard E. Danielson, Mrs. Richard M. Saltonstall, Mrs. Charles G. Weld, Mrs. Earle P. Charlton, Mr. and Mrs. James Simpson, (Ella Smelling) who are staying with the Sumner Pingrees until after Monday. Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Douglas Dillon (Phyllis Ellsworth) of New York, John L. Grandin, Louis K. Liggett, John R. Macomber, George T. Rice, B. Nason Hamlin who is in charge of the sale of boxes, Walter C. Sayles, Larz Anderson, Robert E. Choate, Henry G. Vaughan, James J. Hat Styles for Every Type

By ANN ARDEN

NO LONGER can it be said that it is smart to be homely, for if you look at only the hats of the season you will see that there is not a chance for the plain girl to remain plain. Everything that art and cleverness can do is being done to bring out her innate sweetness so that it becomes a surface quantity quite visible to the naked eye.

* * *

THE DRESS hat made of horsehair or of some one of the softer and more pliable straws is a large affair and is draped low about the neckline with wide expanses left to shade the face on the sides or at the front as the case may be.

MILLINERY has sent and great variety this season. A modern hat designer handles a straw shape as though she had so much fabric in her hands.

THE HAT with medium brim, to accompany simple frocks and for general wear, is of boucle visca in a soft shade of yellow, the brim and crown are deftly moulded from one piece of the light weight, flexible material. A band of yellow patent leather bands the hat at a smart angle, twisted to knot and ends at side front.

THE LARGE hat would be very lovely for a bridesmaid, or to wear with fluffy chiffon frocks for formal afternoon affairs. Of lacy crin, in pale yellow, it is tiptilted on bandeau of yellow satin ribbon, emerging to band opposite side of shallow crown, and joining blue ribbon to form bow and brim loops center back.

ANN ARDEN will answer questions concerning clothes, social customs, or fashions generally. Address your questions to the Boston Evening American or the Boston Sunday Advertiser, or to station WAAB.

The program is to culminate the convention of the organization after one of the most successful conclaves in its history. Ed Sherman, display manager for Kennedy's is chairman of the committee in charge, assisted by Walter J. Kelly of Delane's; Leon Dexter, Palmenberg Fixture Co.; Ezra Dodge, Dodge Fixture Co.; Hy Blustein, Wilbur Shoe Co.; Eugene Mizer, Show Window Equipment Co.; and John Waite, Brine's.

SUMMERFIELD NINE PLAYS

Summerfield's baseball team is scheduled to play the Sherman Printing Co. nine tomorrow at 6:30 p. m. on Franklin Field, Dorchester. The lineup for Summerfield's is: Al Agnetti, second base and manager; L. Dervan, left field and captain; M. Goldberg, pitcher; J. Flynn, catcher; J. Goldberg, first base; J. Boyce, shortstop; E. Morrison, third base; E. Scannell, right field and T. Manna, outfield.

BUYERS AT RACES

Arthur Thornton, hosiery buyer for Filene's; Miss Charlotte Redfern, of the advertising office staff and buyers for some apparel departments will be among the gallery at the races of the Eastern Horse Club at The Country Club this afternoon. Their interest will lie in the fashions worn rather than the performance of the thoroughbreds.

WANTED: SOME SENSE, FEWER MIRACLES

By Gilbert Seldes

"COCKEYED AS USUAL," writes John Carver (or perhaps it is Carter), "you have missed the entire point of the attack on the middle classes.' Just because they are sane and healthy you seem to think that they are the source of all virtue in the world. You forget that they are not only timid, but brutal. Even if they did have the right idea all the time, why should they be so eager to impose their ideas on everyone else? Ever since the middle classes became prosperous they have stood against progress in every form. There hasn't been an artist or a thinker or a religious leader who has not suffered from the obstinacy and hatred of the bourgeoisie."

Natural Suffering

If I remember correctly, John Keats, who was a butcher's son, suffered more from the cruelty of the intellectual upper class. But examples are never satisfactory. Perhaps it is in the nature of things that artists and thinkers and religious leaders should suffer. But the middle classes have certainly rejected more bad artists and more vague thinkers and more false religions than good and true ones. In fact, I suspect that the superior people have seriously missed their cue in this respect because they haven't been particularly discriminating. The Catholic Church is skeptical of miracles nowadays and investigates all reports with scrupulous care for fear that one miracle proved false will shake the entire miraculous foundation of the Church. Whereas, superior people are always beating the drums for miracles in the arts, most of which turn out to be phoneys.

Too Much News in Heaven

I wonder whether the non-professional who reads reviews of books and plays ever gets the impression that the ballyhoo is excessive and that most things are enormously overpraised. About five years ago this could hardly be said without a short essay on logrolling and the implied dishonesty of critics. But the subject of logrolling itself was overdone—any subject is bound to be if everybody insists on talking about it. It is not logrolling, but an infinite capacity for seeing masterpieces which leads to excess.

In the last 10 years probably 500 books have been variously called indispensable and essential and nominated for the good opinion of eternity. I wonder whether five of them will make the grade. When Arnold Bennett died the other day, only two of his many excellent books were turned over to posterity, and probably only one, "The Old Wives' Tale," will be accepted. I even wonder whether today more than three novels of Thomas Hardy are being widely read and whether the most popular and the most prosperous of English poets, Mr. Alfred Noyes, is remembered except as the librettist of a cantata by Deems Taylor.

Reverse English in France

The publishers of France are beginning to be a bit frightened of their own ballyhoo. To call the general run of French criticism logrolling is to flatter it, because after a few independent critics have been counted (on the fingers of one hand), paid notices which look like criticism take the place of reviews. So many masterpieces by so many geniuses have been announced that now the publishers themselves are beginning to withdraw. The business of writing novels has become actually a business. Less than 1000 were issued in 1913 and about 3000 in 1931, and the publishers cheerfully lied about most of the 3000. It is not a new moral sense which now deters them. The public has stopped buying.

Selling Like Hot Cakes

One of the least admirable forms of advertising books is practiced by almost every publisher—that is, advertising the numbers sold. Psychologically this is good advertising, because people will always buy what other people are buying, and the pressure to read the favorite book of the day is a great one. But it is a confession that publishers are not expecting books to be read on merit alone.

One reason for the overpraise of books is the observation of a kind of critical "good form." It becomes a little impolite to "hint a fault or hesitate dislike," when reviewing a contemporary. You may speak your mind about Shakespeare and suggest that some of his plays are dull; you may even announce, with Voltaire, that he wrote like a barbarian. You may dislike Tolstoi and Dante, but it is not quite the right thing to find a flaw in Hemingway or hold that the later work of Ford Madox Ford is not up to his best. After all, these are writers with livings and reputations to make, and it is not seemly to dispraise them.

A Fine Dispraise

One of the reasons for George Jean Nathan's great reputation as a dramatic critic was his smashing attack on about 90 per cent of all the plays he saw. Time not only justified him, but taught his fellow critics to do likewise. The result is that criticism of plays, concentrated in a few experienced hands, is far more vicious to the unworthy than criticism of books. In the past two years only one play has been nominated for eternal glory—nominated by almost universal acclaim—and even in that case a critic took a great risk if he made the faintest reservations about "The Green Pastures."

The Country Is Safe

Several days have passed since Dr. A. A. Brill described Abraham Lincoln as a schizoidmaniac, and the foundations of the American government remain firm. Even the stock market is unshaken. It appears that Dr. Brill never intended to say that Lincoln was insane, and, in fact, Lincoln's "ego never sought refuge in insanity." Moreover, Dr. Brill, who gets around, is compelled to admit that the rough stories Lincoln told would be received with contempt in a 1931 Pullman smoker or in a 1931 revue. Contempt in this case would be because the stories were not rough enough. All of which will make a certain number of people wonder what all the shooting was about in the first place.

Walking

By Charles Hanson Towne

Walking in the country is not what it used to be. To get out of the way of a horse and buggy was nothing in the old days; but to skip from the gay, onrushing motor is quite another matter.

Around Shingle Blessedness we have found many and our thanks are offered for their happy discovery. Connecticut is a lovely State, and there are moments when one catches glimpses that remind one of rural England.

Now, we do not own a motor. We have no head for mechanics; and we dread to consider what would happen to us if our car broke down, or if a tire acquired a puncture.

Yet in our rambles we have come to pity the flying motorist. He misses so many little things which we have seen and come to love. We were hurried along a certain quiet road up here not long ago, on one of those rides which a pitying friend gave us. We were swished by everything, despite our humble pies for less speed. Home again, we determined that walking would be better another time, for we caught fleeting glimpses of farms and fields which we had a desire to drink in more thoroughly by ourself.

So we took that same road only early this morning, and our reward was great. Our motorist friend had lost all that we have now gained, and we deprecate the lack of imagination in the average speed maniac.

For instance, there were little gradations in our walk which the hurtling car never caused us to realize. The sudden turns made us miss certain vistas which we have now found; and there is nothing like pausing when one has the wish to do so, and simply "looking off" for as long a time as one desires to do so. And there is nothing like sitting on a rock on some gentle eminence and peering down into a lavish valley.

Then, too, there are the farmers to whom one may nod; and the excitement of halting another pedestrian, as one never does in the city, of course. It is good and wholesome to realize that country people speak pleasantly to one another, and are not afraid of racketeers.

* * *

Then there was that stone bridge which we had noticed on our hurried trip in the car, with the water purling beneath it. Here we could pause to our heart's content and let the mad motorist flash by. And there was the ancient cemetery with its sunken stones, and the records of lives lived over a century ago.

We love to read advertisements of houses for sale; but it is infinitely more pleasant to see the houses themselves.

But we find that one is accounted eccentric who thus walks along an American highway or lane. Motorists stare at one, probably thinking us mad to go at so leisurely a gait; and often they will pause in friendly fashion and inquire if we do not want a lift. When we, with equal politeness, say no, we prefer to stroll, they glance at one another, and probably imagine we are that escaped lunatic the country round-about has been looking for these many moons.

Well, let them think as they will. We confess that we like motoring when we wish to get somewhere; but sometimes we prefer to get nowhere when we start on a ramble. And if we have a sandwich in our pocket and can stoop down to drink from a running brook, we know that joy which the hurried and harried motorist never knows.

Only, one must have lived long in the city to find these simple pleasures. We find that farmers seldom walk, except from their houses to their barns. They get out the Ford when they go to town; and it is they, we have discovered, who offer us a lift along the road. Seldom is it the city chap. They are too wise to take any chance with the likes of us.

What to Read

By Deems Taylor

Everyone who has ever had a house in the country knows that sooner or later he is bound to have guests, and that, whether they be transients or over-nighters, they are going to want something to read. And what to provide is a problem that has haunted many of us.

I have tried magazine articles upon the subject, but they are no great help. If they are written from the guest's point of view they are, for some reason or other, invariably facetious and therefore unreliable. What good does it do me, when I am trying to think what kind of reading matter to provide for eleven people, to read somebody's snappy description of his emotions upon finding beside the bed in the guest-room Who's Who for 1913, a directory of the members of the Coffee House, and a copy of McEwen's The Thought in Music?

That's not constructive criticism. Having been a week-end guest myself, I know what he does not want in the way of reading matter. I should like to be told what he does want. What serious discussions I have read on the subject were wholly theoretical.

One of them advised me to keep a supply of the latest novels for the guests to read. I tried that, and the guests became so absorbed that they took the books away with them. Another suggested that I follow my own taste in books. Accordingly I put a copy of Julian Street's Where Paris Dines in the guest-room; the result being that our next pair of week-end guests made such audible remarks about Mattie's cooking that she impulsively took the Sunday night train back.

Last week we tried a desperate experiment. As every guest arrived he was shown the book shelves in the front hall, and left to dree his own weird. The results I append herewith. What they indicate I'm sure I don't know. I merely set down, without comment, what an assorted lot of guests and callers read between Friday and Monday.

A Varied Choice

Some Memories and Reflections, by Emma Eames. This was the choice of Mr. Donald MacDonald, late of the London Strange Interlude company. He seemed particularly delighted with the passage in which Mme. Eames, after describing the destruction of San Francisco by earthquake and fire, and the escape of her own party in an automobile whose chauffeur "turned out to be a gentleman," finds time to relate that "after the meager supper we had to go to bed unwashed, as there was no water we could get at."

"The Good Earth," read, with assistance, by Lieutenant-Commander Arthur G. Robinson of the U. S. S. Salt Lake City.

The Literary Digest Atlas of the World, read by Miss Inez Buck, wife of the above, who assisted her husband by hunting, aloud, through the map of China in an effort to identify all the places mentioned in the book he was reading.

The Century Dictionary, read aloud by Miss Ruth Hammond to an enthralled audience consisting of Mr. Christopher Clark and Mr. Foster Kennedy of La Farge & Son, Architects. Miss Hammond seemed especially intrigued by the fact that isotonic means "characterized by equal osmotic pressure," but was unable to give any satisfactory reason for her preference.

Road Map of Connecticut and Southern New York, read by Miss Margaret Perry and Messrs. Cleveland and Lewis in a despairing attempt to find a route that would get them to New York in time to prevent an attack of spontaneous combustion on the part of Miss Antoinette Perry, mother of the first-named Fowler's Dictionary of English Usage, read by Mr. Wells Waldron, but, by acclamation, not aloud. Mr. Waldron also asked for title suggestions for his forthcoming novel, something that would help sell the book. Miss Marion Patton, author of Dance of the Tortoise, suggested What Price Glory; Mrs. Dorothy Griffin suggested The Complete Works of William Shakespeare. Both were rejected.

The Thirteenth, Greatest of Centuries, by James J. Walsh, K. C. St. G., D.D., Ph.D., LL.D., Litt.D. (Georgetown, Sc.D. (Notre Dame). This was carried about for two days, but not read, by Miss Mary Kennedy, who explained with an air of complete reasonableness, that she had just been reading a history of France.

And Some More

The Wild Party, by Joseph Moncure March, who brought it with him, and, owing to an unprecedented attack of shyness, refused to read it aloud. Refusal enthusiastically seconded by Miss Peggy Wood, wife of same.

Round the Year, by Arthur I. Gates and Miriam Blanton Leeper. An angularly dull book, read aloud, with no encouragement whatsoever, by Miss Joan Taylor, a beginner. With an enthusiasm that bordered upon the morbid, Miss Taylor insisted upon retailing such gems as: "The dog is white. The dog is blue. The dog is big. The boy has a little cat. The boy has a big dog. Peter plays with the big dog. Peggy plays with the little cat."

Plagued by the Nightingale, read by Mme. Maria Gagarine, what time she was not hearing Miss Taylor's selected readings.

The Plays of Noel Coward; The Girls, by Edna, Ferber; Rebound, by Rose Franken; Steps, by Arnold Bennett. The selections of these by Mr. Christopher Clark seemed peculiar, inasmuch as Mr. Clark, being a painter, naturally is unable to read. Upon investigation it was found that he had placed them in conjunction with 1 porcelain statuetta (Munich, sikned Schwartzkopf); 1 pottery bowl (Frank) Galleries); 2 bananas (Brown Bros. Ideal Market); and 3 apples (Ibid.), and was painting the lot.

WILBUR, GIBSON GIVEN YALE DEGREES

New Haven, June 17 (AP)—Honorary degrees of doctor of law were conferred today at the 230th commencement exercises of Yale University on Ray Lyman Wilbur, Secretary of the Interior, and Hugh Gibson, ambassador to Belgium.

Ten honorary degrees were conferred by President James Rowland Angell. In addition, degrees in course were given to 507 from the graduate schools. Bachelor degrees in arts, philosophy and science were conferred on 581 seniors of Yale College and Sheffield Scientific School yesterday.

Other recipients of honorary degrees were:

Doctor of divinity, Frank Chamberlain Porter, New Haven, professor emeritus of biblican theology; doctor of law, Learned Hand, New York, judge of the United States Circuit Court; doctor of science, Eugene Lindsay Opie, Philadelphia, director of department of pathology, University of Pennsylvania, and John Ripley Freeman, Providence, civil and mechanical engineer; master of science, Samuel Randall Detwiler, New York, professor of anatomy, Columbia University; master of arts, George Townsend Adee, 93, New York; Edwin Pardi Root, manufacturer, New Haven; James Grafton Rogers, Washington, Assistant Secretary of State.

Dance of Electrons Inside a Wire Is Made Audible

Los Angeles, June 17 (AP)—The music of the hot dance of electrons inside a wire was made audible to several thousand persons in a lecture by Dr. H. H. Arnold at a session of the American Association for Advancement of Sciences last night.

The noise of this electron traveler, at ordinary room temperature is but one-billionth of the smallest sound that can be detected by ear. But Dr. Arnold, of the Bell Telephone Laboratories of New York, brought it to the public's ears with amplification of a million billion times.

The hotter the wire, the madder the dance and greater the noise, while under the chill of liquid air the electrons lose their syncopating pep.

After 17,000 Miles He Buys a Trunk

San Francisco, June 17 (AP)—After traveling 17,000 miles around the Orient, Alexander Woollcott, New York dramatic critic, playwright and author, landed here and immediately went shopping for a trunk.

"I couldn't go back to New York without a trunk," he said. "It wouldn't look right. Nobody'd believe I'd been away."

Gasoline Outlook Same

Los Angeles, June 17—Despite heated conferences and high hopes of major and minor oil companies, the gasoline price situation today remained unchanged.

CURTIS' GIFT TO PENNSYLVANIA U. IS MILLION

Philadelphia, June 17 (AP)—President Thomas S. Gates of the University of Pennsylvania disclosed today that Cyrus H. K. Curtis, Philadelphia publisher, had "made an unrestricted gift to the university of something more than $1,000,000."

Dr. Gates, at the 191st commencement, said the university "never has received so large a gift in a single sum from one individual."

He also announced that Charles Day, widely known engineer who died recently, had left $100,000 as an unrestricted fund to the university, and that the trustees had determined on $2,000,000 for endowment as the minimum goal of Pennsylvania's financial effort within the next year or two.

He said in all likelihood the trustees would keep the Curtis gift intact as the "Cyrus H. K. Curtis foundation for the permanent endowment of teaching and research."

The commencement exercises marked the formal presentation of Mr. Gates as president of the university. The honorary degree of doctor of laws was conferred upon him by Dr. Josiah H. Penniman, provost.

Among several others, the honorary degree of doctor of laws was conferred upon Dr. Charles E. Beury, president of Temple University.

FAY WRAY MAY PLAY OPPOSITE FARRELL IN "HEARTBREAK"

Rex Bell to Replace John Wayne in "Battling With Buffalo Bill"

By HARRIET PARSONS
Universal Service Motion Picture Editor
Copyright, 1931, by Universal Service, Inc.

LOS ANGELES, June 17—Whom would you like to see teamed with Charlie Farrell? Other than Janet Gaynor, I mean. How about Fay Wray? Fay has been coming along steadily in the talkies and now there is talk of placing her opposite Charlie in "Heartbreak."

Harriet Parsons

Fay and Charlie might be an interesting combination at that. Although I have a feeling that Fay's poise will place an overstress on Charlie's boyishness.

Al Werker will direct "Heartbreak."

AS SOON as he sees Clara Bow comfortably settled at his ranch near the Nevada border line, Rex Bell will rush back to Hollywood and don the grease paint. Just before leaving town Rex signed with Universal to play a part in "Battling With Buffalo Bill." He replaces John Wayne, who is unable to finish his Columbia picture in time. Rex, whose loyalty to Clara has been splendid, has been devoting all his time to her affairs at the expense of his own. Perhaps he'll be rewarded by scoring a success in "Battling With Buffalo Bill."

Versatility Big Factor in Hollywood

VERSATILITY SEEMS to be Hollywood's long suit these days. There's young Doug Fairbanks, whose First National contract includes everything but actually grinding the camera. Ramon Novarro, besides acting, has been directing foreign versions for M. G. M. Lowell Sherman and Lionel Barrymore both have acting and directing contracts. Not forgetting the astounding Edmund Goulding, who writes, directs and composes music for his pictures and sings over the radio in his spare time to keep from getting bored. The latest to join the Jacks of all trades is Irving Pichel, recently seen as Chatterton's husband in "The Right to Love." Paramount has put Mr. Pichel under contract to write and act. After playing a feature role in "The Road to Reno," with Buddy Rogers and Carman Barnes, he will have the lead in "The Man With Red Hairs."

SPEAKING OF versatility, John Halliday is another turned Goulding. Radio has purchased Mr. Halliday's contract from Warner's and when he finishes "Consolation Marriage," he will both direct and act in "Sour Grapes," Vincent Lawrence. The Lawrence stage play was one of Halliday's many Broadway successes.

PERSONAL to L. O. P.:—This is getting embarrassing. Have to correct you again. You wrote in last week (before you sailed off to Honolulu and left me holding the well-known sack) that Bebe Daniels got her start with Mack Sennett. As a matter of fact, Bebe never worked for the comedy maestro. Twenty dollars kept them from coming to terms. Sennett offered Bebe thirty a week and Bebe held out for fifty! Mack wishes now he loosened the purse string. When it rebounds me—do I have to pay the grocery bill—or can I charge it?

HEARD AND OVERHEARD—about town: Automobile accidents causing plenty of Hollywood heartaches lately. Everyone shocked at the tragic death of Helen Harding, manager of Villa Carlotta and Chateau Elysee, where many of the movie colony's most famous live. Sylvia Sidney, relieved that her broken ankle, also incurred in a motor accident, will not keep her from playing in "Street Scene." Production on "Waterloo Bridge," held up by the sudden illness of Betty Davis, who may have to undergo an appendix operation. Here's a more cheery note—George K. Arthur and Kari Dane leaving for New York to be reunited on the screen in a series of shorts for Paramount. Ralf Harolde signing for a heavy role in RKO-Pathe's "Eddie Cuts In"—Eddie Quillan's next.

LIONEL BARRYMORE, considered by many a better actor than his more spectacular brother, Jack, will have the lead in "The Yellow Ticket." Barrymore will play the part of the unscrupulous Jewish whom the heroine stabs to death with a hat pin. In the old days the hat pin was regarded by the fair lady's last resort in an hour of need. But in these days of toughness films they'll probably substitute a snappy little platinum trimmed machine gun. Fox has borrowed Lionel from his home studio, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, and with him in "The Yellow Ticket" will be Elissa Landi, Paul Kavanaugh and David Manners.

IT'S A SWELL SHOW THEY GIVE AT THE BOSTON THIS WEEK

Headed by that favorite of vaudeville fans all over the country, Sylvia Clark, and the Boston Male Chorus, always a big drawing card, the vaudeville bill at the RKO-Boston this week is an all-star one. Sylvia gives another capital performance and the Boston Male Chorus scores another big triumph. Then on the screen there is Robert Woolsey in "Everything's Rosie."

What Stars in Movies Eat

By HARRIS MORGAN

Tell me what you eat and I'll tell you what might be paraphrased to index the favorite dishes of some of Hollywood's most famous epicures.

Welsh rabbitt is Marion Davies' epicurean delight, we are told, with "wet" corned beef hash holding second honors. Old-fashioned Southern fried chicken is Marie Dressler's greatest table treat and reliable authority gives it that Greta Garbo would rather sit down to a tempting spread of anchovies and similar appetizers than roast turkey.

John Gilbert's fondness for French lamb chops, grilled with a sprinkling of garlic, has won for him a place on the menu in the studio luncheon. Joan Crawford still thrills her palate with hot mustard on crackers and Lawrence Tibbett stirs the envy of modest dietitians with thick, raw steaks.

Robert Montgomery prefers a tasty beef stew to squab, but Wallace Beery revels in hand-potted quail or mountain trout for epicurian sprees. Adolphe Menjou is a corned-beef-and-cabbage addict and William Haines has a flair for juicy roasts of baby beef with Southern boiled pork and mustard greens running a close second. Norma Shearer confesses a weakness for liver and onions but admit she resists its lure when working or socially obligated. Clark Gable is a chili hound and even puts in on chicken pot pie, another favorite dish.

Film Who's Who

Clark Gable, playing the second male lead in Joan Crawford's latest Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picture, "Laughing Sinners," at Loew's Orpheum next Friday, was born at Cadiz, O. He began a footlight career with a traveling repertory company and subsequently appeared with Jane Cowl and other stars. As Killer Mears in "The Last Mile" he achieved success and was at once drawn to Hollywood, where he scored in "The Painted Desert," "The Easiest Way," "Dance, Fools, Dance" and "The Secret Six."

Seth Parker in Film Role Soon

"Seth Parker" has arranged to arrive in Hollywood, July 20, with 12 members of his famous troupe. Phillips Lord is home in Maine immaculate in white flannels, taking in the dog show at the Beverly Hills hotel. MRS. REGIS TOOMEY showing her handsome wire-haired terrier, Mr. N. The air filled with squeals of pampered Pekingese and their doting dowager owner. The CEDRIC GIBBONS (DOLORES DEL RIO), MARY ASTOR, the SAMUEL RAPHAELSONS, weekending at Agua Caliente, the Mexican Monte Carlo. The ALFRED LUNTS (LYNNE FONTANNE), great running mates in the theater and in life, discovering the Hollywood Brown Derby. ARTHUR CAESAR of the polo-playing Caesars, taking a house at Laguna for the summer. That's all today. See you tomorrow!

Lord was brought up in Maine on his grandfather's farm where he absorbed the homely ideals, philosophy, customs and viewpoint of the rural strata. It was these childhood experiences that gave him the idea for his half hour on the air, "Sunday Evening at Seth Parker's."

Lord was the first to bring to the air a genuinely authentic presentation of the old-time cottage "gathering," with the singing of old-time hymns.

Lord became interested in entertainment early, and in Bowdoin College took an active part in the glee club. He does declare he was more interested in athletics than in literature. Graduating in 1925, he accepted a position as principal of the high school in a Connecticut town

Moving to New York, he turned his hand to the candy business, the law and publishing, still continuing his writing when radio attracted him.

He sketched out the idea of Seth Parker on a radio broadcaster, who had a gap in his program and gave him an opportunity to display his stories on the air. For six weeks he went on with his singing school without pay. A broadcasting station in Hartford, Conn., became interested and paid him $25 a week for his program. Soon other stations took up his program and before long "Seth Parker's Old-Fashioned Singing School" was on five stations. Then a national concern became interested and the result was successful.

It may be a fish story when papa comes home with a string of what have you when all the finny ones show the earmarks of being fresh from the fish monger's, shop, but it is no fish story about the 50-pound halibut Leila Hyams landed on her day off during the filming of a picture.

Once when they were playing in vaudeville, the elder Keaton absent-mindedly was in the foyer when the act was due to go on. An usher was hurriedly sent for him.

Stuart Irwin has been added to the cast of Irene Dunne's first starring vehicle, "Consolation Marriage," which is to be directed by Paul Sloane. Pat O'Brien has been announced for the lead.

Better Sound Reproduction

Of outstanding character in the presentation of Gloria Swanson's "indiscreet," opening at Loew's State Friday, is the improvement in sound reproduction. Ever since the advent of the talking pictures, engineers have worked on the problem of perfect sound reproduction. They wanted to obtain such clear and complete reproduction of sound as was mechanically possible to make it. Hundreds of thousands of dollars have been spent in developing improved recording apparatus.

Gloria Swanson

One of the chief problems engineers have had to solve was that of extra noises creeping through the all-hearing mechanical ear of the microphone. In other words, these background noises made it impossible to use larger casts, thereby making the production suffer from lack of proper atmosphere for whatever the occasion demanded. This not only hurt the production, but also created a grave economic problem for extra players.

Now, however, a new type of microphone has been perfected which will catch only the sound the director wants recorded. Background noises may be totally eliminated if he so desires. It marks a forward step in mechanical achievement. "Indiscreet" was recorded by the new system.

Nan Halperin at Met Thursday

Nan Halperin, stage star, known for her power of mimicry and her comedy impersonations, comes to the Metropolitan in person, beginning Thursday, to appear with "The Little Revue," a Frank Cambria production.

Billed as "Broadway's best Girl," Nan Halperin brings rare charm to the stage. She has appeared in many great Broadway successes and has long been a headliner on "Big time" vaudeville.

Associated with Miss Halperin in "The Little Revue" will be The Rio Brothers, the Mullens Sisters and the Merriel Boys and Girls. The stage settings are said to be the most beautiful that have ever been shown on the Metropolitan stage.

RAIL CARRIERS FILE PLEA FOR RATE INCREASE

Washington, June 17 (AP)—The railroads of the United States today presented to the Interstate Commerce Commission their petition for a 15 per cent increase in freight rates as a means of meeting the emergency caused by the drastic decline in operating revenues.

Last Thursday the executives of Eastern, Western and Southern roads, meeting in New York City, finally decided to request the biggest increase designed to yield annually $400,000,000 in additional gross income.

As evidence for their desire for assistance without undue delay, the carriers recommended that the commission's investigation of their application be of a "limited character" for the purpose of determining whether the new schedules should be allowed to become effective without the 90-day suspension usually ordered when rate revisions are made.

RAIL EMERGENCY

Even if this procedure is followed, it is unofficially pointed out, it will probably be early autumn before the necessary hearings can be completed and a decision reached.

The brief, asserting that the roads were "confronted with an emergency threatening serious impairment of their financial resources and their capacity to assure the public a continuance of efficient and adequate service," said the increased revenues would yield a yearly railway net operating income equal to less than 4 per cent on the value of their property. The fair return prescribed by law is 5.75 per cent, but during the first four months of this year, the application said, the return had fallen to an annual basis of 2.24 per cent for the class one carriers. In 1930 it was 3.45 per cent. Earnings of the class one roads since 1921 were said to have dropped about $2,575,000,000 below the rate of return on capital authorized by law.

The brief emphasized the danger of an impaired credit position and its effect upon railroad securities, especially bonds. If the roads were getting a fair return, it said, "railway securities which are now appropriate for insurance, savings banks and trust investments would continue to maintain their status.

ESSENTIAL TO NATION.

"The public's basis the market for railroad bonds and stocks can be strengthened. It is vitally important that it should be maintained in order that additional capital may be secured for further improvements. Steam railroad transportation has not become a moribund enterprise. It is essential to the economic welfare of this country and indispensable to the national defence."

The petition recalled that the roads had clung to their policy, announced late in 1929, of continuing a normal program of expenditures "as long as it could be justified from the standpoint of the trust reposed by the railroad security holders in the management of the carriers who were administering property which, though devoted to public use, is nevertheless private property.

EMPLOYES HELD

"That this policy was so adhered to is shown by the fact that during the year 1930 in a period of declining traffic these carriers made capital expenditures amounting to approximately $898,000,000. They also continued in employment wage earners whose services were not indispensably necessary to the transaction of the volume of business which was offered by transportation, thereby incurring operating expenses which might have been substantially diminished in a program of severe economy."

Concluding wages, the brief said the railroad executives had concluded that "if the question must be met and dealt with, it must be at once."

The petition was signed by J. J. Pelley, president of the New York, New Haven & Hartford, chairman of the executive committee of presidents representing Eastern carriers; H. A. Scandrett, president of the Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul & Pacific, on behalf of the Western and Canadian Pacific groups, and W. B. Leach, president of the Louisville & Nashville, for the Southern road.

Postal Employes Celebrate Holiday

Postal employes stopped work at 10 a. m. today in stations, branches and general departments of the Boston postoffice in observance of Bunker Hill Day.

Postmaster William E. Hurley had a skeleton force at work, however, in making the first morning delivery trip.

Connannon, 1630 Columbia rd., South Boston; John B. Doherty, 1909 Dorchester ave., Dorchester, and Charles B. O'Connell, 61 M st., South Boston.

MISS KELLEY NAMED

CASTINGS INSPECTOR

Daniel Donnelly of 132 Emerson st., South Boston, has been appointed a temporary inspector of castings in the water division of the public works department.

OUTINGS FOR CHILDREN

The Ward 14 Democratic Club of Dorchester is to give a series of outings for the children of that district this summer. Charles Kaplan is chairman of the committee. Other members are Representatives Julius Sobel and Bernard Finkelstein, Abe Gray, Fred Talamini, Harry Loftchick, Jack Gedzerman and Harry Ginsburg.

AT RELIEF PARLEY

Walter V. McCarthy, secretary to the overseers of public welfare, is in Minneapolis attending the national conference on relief work.

BLOOM TO RUN AGAIN

John Bloom, who was defeated for City Council in Ward 14 two years ago by City Councilor Israel Ruby, plans to be a candidate again this fall.

LIKES THE GRAPPLERS

WELCOMES CURLEY HOME

John B. Wenzler, South Boston attorney, who plans to be a candidate for the Legislature from Ward 6 in 1932, was among those who called at City Hall today to pay their respects to Mayor Curley and to welcome him home. Wenzler was recently discharged from the Carney Hospital, where he was confined for some days after a bullet, accidentally discharged from a gun he was examining, penetrated his left leg.

BAY VIEWERS ORGANIZE

Maurice Foley, candidate for the City Council from Ward 7, South Boston, has organized the Bay View Associates for the purpose of registering voters in that district who will be favorable to his candidacy.

NEVINS MAY RUN

Judging by the activities of the members of the Ward 13 Democratic Club of Dorchester their president, John F. Nevins, will be a candidate for the City Council from that district this fall. Nevins is one of the most popular men in the district and has been a lifelong resident of the ward.

OUTING IS PLANNED

The Henry J. Sullivan Associates of Flood sq., South Boston, plan to have an outing down Boston Harbor late in July. Daniel D. Donnelly, president of the organization, heads the committee.

HE'S BOSS NOW

ELY TO NAME 100

Governor Ely, between now and the end of the year, has approximately 100 appointments to make. The bulk of these are trustees of various institutions. Outside of the bank commissioner and the registrar of motor vehicles, the only big job pending is that of commissioner on the industrial accident board.

NEWS AND NOTES OF AUTOMOTIVE WORLD

HIGH SPEED IN SECOND IS A 'NECESSITY'

Thousands of motorists have experienced a feeling of unsatisfactory car performance at traffic lights, when they have seen a car flash ahead of them when the light changes from red to green, said J. C. Harvey, president of J. C. Harvey Co., Boston distributors.

"To accomplish this a car must have a higher developed second gear, which will enable the driver rapidly to accelerate to as high as 45 miles an hour before going into high gear.

"Sluggish' cars may be seen at any traffic stop, but there are always a few which are able to make rapid progress in heavy traffic and this may be attributed to the use of a modern second gear.

"Willys-Overland has met the demand, not only for cars of high power and speed development for open highways but for unusual activity in city traffic.

"The Willys six will accelerate to 45 miles an hour in second gear and the Willys eight steps up to 50. Such performance places these low-priced cars and eights in a conspicuous position and makes them highly desirable for city driving and also for high speed work on the open highways."

N.E. BAROMETER SEEN AS GOOD

New England is about the best section of the country today as far as indicating that business is improving, Joseph W. Frazer, general sales manager of the Chrysler Sales Corp., Detroit, told a group of about 150 dealers and salesmen of the C. E. Fay Co., Boston distributors, at a meeting and luncheon held at the salesrooms on Commonwealth ave. Pres. C. E. Fay presided.

J. W. Frazer

He pointed out that this section is considered a barometer by motor executives because for years they had observed when conditions begin to slow up or improve the first reactions are observed here. Then the cycle goes across the country slowly.

At the factories today, he stated that the maps indicating sales conditions show that the percentage per population favors the Atlantic coast states. Reducing that these factors are forerunners of better times, the automotive men are more optimistic.

So in the Chrysler organization plans are being shaped up now for the next half year. As showing their faith in what seems possible the company has just approved a new advertising appropriation for newspapers and magazines running into some millions of dollars.

That the faith of the executives in an upturn this year was not misplaced he pointed to the results from introducing the new Chrysler Six at show time.

NEW MODEL IN HUDSON SERIES

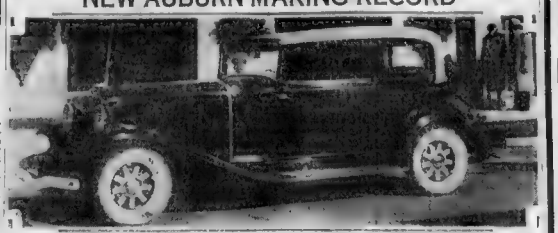
The Hudson Motor Car Company announces the addition of a notable new model to be known as the brougham de luxe. The new model incorporates many new developments, particularly in the luxuriousness of upholstery, fittings and appointments. Selective free wheeling is optional.

Colored a brown shade, known as mountain ash tan, the new model on the 126-in. long Hudson chassis; long, swinging streamlines lending distinction to the whole, with the color motif extending to tire covers and the top of dull silk mohair.

The luxurious interior is finished in dark gray Bedford cord, laid over seats and seat backs without pleating, and piped in brown leather.

Fixed arm rests on both sides, and folding arm rest in the center provide increased comfort, while a folding arm rest can also be made to divide the front seat.

NEW AUBURN MAKING RECORD



According to Gerald Lyons, the New England zone, under his supervision, holds the second and largest record for sales throughout the country for the new Auburn two-door five-passenger sedan pictured here.

EMPLOYES TO HOLD OUTING

Tomorrow is to be a red-letter day in the lives of the employes of Laffme & Partridge, Inc., one of Boston's pioneer Ford dealers. For this day marks the 25th anniversary of H. E. Partridge Ford dealership, etc.

To suitably commemorate the occasion the entire organization, their wives, sweethearts and families, some 400 in total, will enjoy an outing at the summer estate of H. B. Smith, director of used car sales for this company.

The estate is located in Norton. It is an ideal spot for such an affair, bordering on a beautiful 650-acre sandy shore lake.

Among the events planned will be golf, tennis, tether ball, quoits, turtle race, frog race, aquatic sport, etc.

Big Gain Shown in Lee Tire Sales

"In a dealer checkup from all our New England representatives, tire sales have shown a tremendous gain within the past 10 days, and we are looking forward with an added degree of optimism to our greatest summer and fall business," stated Guy D. Niles, New England district manager of the Lee Tire & Rubber Co.

NOTABLE ADDITION TO HUDSON LINE

Lady Wilkins Received Hourly Radio Messages

She declared that she had received hourly messages from Sir Hubert, and that "everything is fine with him." She added:

"I don't know when I shall see him. I want to rest up a few days in London.

"I was terribly disappointed when I heard of the mishap to the Nautilus' engines, and for a time I was most apprehensive."

Man About Town

By AL DUFFY

Reminiscences

One night about three weeks ago this old busybody had the great good fortune to sit on the side lines and sip beer in the Ritz-Carlton while George M. Cohan and Donald Brian, two of Boston's prime favorites, regaled one another with memories of bygone days in the theater.

Under the mellowing influence of the beer, the pair were turned back 31 years to the week when Donny—you can't be in Donald Brian's company more than 10 minutes without jumping into the ballet of calling him Donny—was leading man in Proctor's 125th St. Theater Stock Company. The bill of the week was the popular Irish piece called "Myles Aroon."

As a stock leading man, Donny was drawing down the princely sum of $125 weekly, despite the fact that he had yet to "arrive" on Broadway. For that matter, the just-formed firm of Cohan and Harris had not "arrived" either, but their heads were going with plans and they were raring to go.

Word had seeped down to Broadway that a young fellow named Brian was doing a great piece of acting in "Myles Aroon." Thus it was that George Cohan and Sam Harris wended their way to 125th st. this particular evening and sat through a performance. They were carried away with the pep and dash that young Brian put into his work and, after the performance, Cohan went backstage to see Donny, whom he had known back in the earlier Boston days.

"Kid," said George, out of the side of his mouth, of course, "we're going to make a star out of you. Sam and I sat out there tonight and watched you and we know just exactly the kind of a play for you. We're going to call it 'Harrigan of Harvard' and it will make you famous."

Of course, Donny was flattered—indeed, he was so flattered that he agreed to work in the play for $80 a week when Cohan explained that he and Harris were just starting out and didn't have an abundance of money behind them.

Well, when the fall season came around "Harrigan of Harvard" hadn't been written—it hasn't been written to this day, for that matter—so, to keep himself busy while waiting for the play, Donny took a part in "Forty-Five Minutes From Broadway" at $90 a week. It was during rehearsals that one of the humorous incidents that are bound to crop up in all new shows occurred.

There was a chorus girl in the show named LeBoeuf who had just married a young St. Louisan who was earning $10,000 a year in the shoe business—which was a tremendous income in those days. And all for the love of Miss LeBoeuf, her husband threw up his job to become a chorus man in "Forty-Five Minutes From Broadway." In the second act it was the young man's duty to lead on the chorus singing "So Long Mary." Now it happened that the young man was quite deaf and, therefore, he was unable to walk in time with the music.

Cohan and A. L. Erlanger were sitting out in the auditorium during a rehearsal when they noticed that the young man was out of time. Cohan labored long and patiently with the boy trying to correct him, but all to no avail. Finally Cohan's temper cracked. He pulled off his derby hat and fairly flung it through it. Erlanger, too, lost his temper. He jumped up and proceeded to call the offending boy every name that he could lay his tongue to. Everyone stood shocked while the all-powerful Mr. Erlanger waxed eloquent in expressing his disgust at the lowly chorus boy's thickness.

Suddenly the boy—he stood about five feet, seven inches tall—lumbered down to the footlights.

"Say, you," he thundered, "Don't you talk to me like that!"

Everyone was amazed at his temerity.

"Listen," the boy continued, "I gave up a $10,000 job to work in this punk little show of yours. If you don't like the way I do my work—if you don't like the way I walk—you can fire me. But you nor nobody else can stand there and talk to me like that in front of these ladies and gentlemen. Get me?"

Erlanger by this time was on the verge of apoplexy, but Cohan stepped into the breach. The pint-sized Georgie trotted up to the chorus boy, he tapped him on the shoulder and said:

"Kid, you're O. K. You've got spunk. You stay in this show and you can walk any way you damn please. That's the kind of a little guy I am!"

But, so long as the show ran Cohan could never stay in the theater and watch "So Long Mary" because the sight of the boy walking out of time would have been more torture than his song-and-dance man's heart could stand.

WHO WILL WRITE THE EPIC OF BUNKER HILL? THE POETS' OPPORTUNITY

By ROBERT E. ROGERS

IN THESE DAYS OF TIRED PATRIOTS and perfunctory celebrations it is refreshing to see how year after year Charlestown gathers its civic energy and enthusiasm to revive the memory of Bunker Hill. This and the South Boston celebration of Evacuation Day have something of the quality of those old New England gatherings of a century ago, which left behind them great monuments of our literature—Webster's address when the shaft was dedicated, Emerson's laconic and immortal poem at Concord.

ROBERT E. ROGERS

It has been years since I went to Charlestown on the 17th. I have in my veins the blood of a grandfather to whom public celebrations were more than meat and drink. Like Job's war horse he said Ha-Ha! to the trumpets, and no parade or pageantry was complete without his presence. I still feel sort of empty and discontented when there is a military parade going on and I am not there, even in these days when the automobile has made it so difficult to get anywhere one wants to go that one simply does not go. I should have liked, this year, to have accepted Charlestown's invitation, if only to see whether time and the temptations of the open road have diminished those close-packed and happy crowds that used to line the steep streets around the monument waiting for the parade that used to be such a fine expression of civic patriotism.

The oratory on the night before usually manages to express more significance than is common on such occasions. Important people say important things, rather than the usual stereotypes of a ceremonial occasion. But Bunker Hill still lacks a poet!

Incentives Needed for Poets

It was a fine, old custom, in the New England of even half a century ago, to hear a poet as well as an orator. Such occasions enriched our native literature. Emerson's Attic verses at Concord, Lowell's great Commemoration Ode, Whittier's occasional thrilling songs vied with the speeches of a Webster or an Everett. Not all of them were great. Genius cannot be summoned at will. But once in so often one heard a great and simple poem. How another "Boston Hymn" would have stirred our hearts a year ago!

But poets need encouragement. They do not thrive in an air where orators talk only of business depression and disarmament and prohibition. Their themes are simple and profound. Honor and glory and devotion to the homeland and a cause worth sacrificing for. Are there no more causes? Are there only expediences?

The great ages of poetry have encouraged poetry. The ancient Athenians, the people of the Renaissance, our New England forefathers offered prizes and rewards to the poet, strove to commemorate great events in verse, made a place for the poet at their public functions. And poetry flourished where now it is moribund.

Our time is full of latent poets who need only the incentive. Years ago, when I was a cub reporter on the Brooklyn Eagle, a Brooklyn society offered a prize for a poem on the Battle of Brooklyn (or Long Island). I became interested in the idea, not knowing that Walt Whitman had written it once and for all in "The Centenarian's Story." But for a time I prowled around old Brooklyn, trying to visualize amid the tangle of elevated tracks and stores and traffic the vanished Brooklyn of the day of Washington's retreat—the Canarsie Canal, the meadows of Prospect Park, the Heights above the harbor where the Commander stood directing his sad retreat to the Jersey shore. Even if the poem was never written, the story came alive to me.

But Bunker Hill has no poet. Oliver Wendell Holmes wrote "Grandmother's Story of the Battle," in humorous doggerel, Amy Lowell one of her imagistic vignettes called "1775" —I remember no others of any importance. Yet what a story is here, to set the young man and woman prowling round the bricks and paving of Charlestown, under the noisy El, around the monument, trying to recreate the little hilly village on that pregnant morning, trying to trace the old water-front of river and bay, all obliterated now, and to see in the mind's eye the thing as it was.

Through the evening the little companies came marching. From Cambridge, under the benediction of the president of Harvard. From Cape Ann, where, having heard the news of Lexington, they set to drilling in the old Hannah Jumper house that still stands under its elm in Rockport. From Boston. All night long they threw up their hasty earth-works, and the morning saw Prescott, wrapped in his flowered dressing gown, strolling on the rude redoubt.

We Have the Hill!

Below on the shore the scarlet coats, the lobsterbacks, formed and reformed for the assault. Like the men that fought at Minden, in Kipling's poem, they had stocks beneath their chins, six inches high or more. In their hot, heavy dress uniforms, tight breeches and leggings, pipe-clayed and polished, they climbed in close order to the assault where the farmers and tradesmen crouched, waiting for them, in their shirtsleeves.

We are told that the British troops were trained simply to present their pieces and fire, without aiming. That might serve in European battles on an open plain, but here under the very sights of farmers who carried their own squirrel-shooters, it was murder. "Don't fire till you see the whites of their eyes!" Twice the line rolled back in confusion down the hill, twice it reformed.

Pitcairn is killed. Warren is shot, and many another —Yankees of English blood, Irishmen, Scotsmen, Negroes. For the last time the broken red line, whipped into formation with the flat of the sword, climbs—and conquers. Numbers tell, adequate ammunition tells, and, I suspect, discipline tells. George Washington is to have a hard time of it in Cambridge, within a year, drilling some discipline into his casual and unruly volunteer militia. They fail him at Brooklyn and elsewhere, until Steuben, the German at Valley Forge, makes a regular army out of them.

The British ship home to London the captured cannon. But, as the tourist said, we have the hill!

Why does not the Charlestown committee stir up our poets, acknowledged and secret, by some proffered reward or honor that will make them rise to the height of this great argument? I know of one young poet on a Boston newspaper who would rise to it nobly. And there are many others. Poets may be born, not made—but public recognition helps.

$1,500,000 SUIT LOOMS OVER BUILDING

Architects Claim They Were Engaged to Plan New Home of the Public Works Dept.

The awarding of contracts for the new $1,500,000 Public Works Building, authorized by a recent legislative bill, may result in a suit for damages against the State Department of Public Works with a prominent Boston firm of architects as plaintiff, it was revealed today.

The firm of Adden, Parker, Clinch & Cook, 177 State st., today retained two former attorneys general, Herbert Parker and Henry A Wyman, to forward their claim to commissions they demand as a result of work done on plans for the new building

A member of the firm today stated that the Department of Public Works had directed his concern to prepare plans and specifications, with the understanding that, when the necessary funds were provided by the legislature, the firm would be awarded the contract.

"After we had the plans completed, we learned the contract had been awarded to another firm," the architect said. "We feel we are entitled to the contract, and our attorneys are arranging a conference with Gov. Ely to ask his intervention before instituting legal proceedings."

27 ABOARD AS SHIP GROUNDS

Twenty-seven members of the crew of the fishing schooner Isabelle Parker were forced to wait for high tide today after their vessel, bearing a cargo of 25,000 pounds of fish, went aground on Narrow Light bar, between Georges and Gallups islands.

A crew of coast guardsmen from the Allerton Point station went to the scene and found the ship undamaged and the crew safe. After examination it was determined the craft would float off in high tide. Two tugboats went to her assistance from Boston.

The schooner is owned by Arthur L. Parker of 13 Fish Pier, Boston, and was skippered by Capt. Frank Santos of Provincetown

2 LYNN FIRES ROUT FAMILIES

Eight families, numbering several mothers carrying sleeping infants through smoke-filled halls, were driven to the street early today and last night in two Lynn fires.

The most serious of the fires was at 196 Essex st., where a blaze, starting from defective wiring, swept the third and fourth floors and ate through the roof of the four-story block

Henry Ralston of Western ave., Lynn, discovered the fire and sounded an alarm. Then he raced into the building and pounded on doors, arousing the occupants.

The six families occupying the upper floors of the block fled in night garb to the rain-wet street.

Firemen battled for more than an hour from aerial ladders and the roofs of the burning building and an adjoining block.

Another fire last night at 8 Beede ave. drove out the families of Charles Hughes and Nathan Hersom.

Smoke from the fire in a pile of rubbish in the basement, filled the house with smoke, and the blaze caught on woodwork in the cellar of the two-family wooden dwelling

Damage there was held down to $200.

Window Thieves Rob Dorchester Store

Thieves, with a scorn for danger, removed 29 silk dresses and eight women's coats, valued at $260, some time early today, from the ladies' apparel shop of Stanley J. Mintz, 1469 Dorchester ave., Fields Corner, Dorchester.

Despite the fact that the shop is on a main thoroughfare, brightly lighted, the thieves smashed the plate glass show window and removed the clothing

Damage there was held down to $200.

How He Plays Mama to 3 Baby Skunks

Springfield, June 17 (AP)—It's all in the day's work for Theodore W. Pearson, agent for the S. P. C. A. to be asked to look out for a litter of white rats or young alligators thrown on a heartless world, but today when John Peebles of Blandford handed over a trio of weekold skunks the agent confessed the experience was new. Peebles found them after the mother had been killed.

VICTIM'S HEAD BATTERED BY KILLERS

Body Found in Underpass of New Haven Road in the Town of Bellingham

With head bashed and an empty, unfired revolver a few feet away, the body of Alfred L. Foster, 40, a railroad detective, was found today under an underpass in Bellingham, near Franklin.

The strange circumstances surrounding the discovery and the probability the man was murdered gave a mystery to local, railroad and state police.

Foster lived in Sedgwick st., Jamaica Plain, and was assigned to duty on the New York, New Haven & Hartford railroad east of New London and Willimantic

WAS AFTER THIEVES

Yesterday he was given a secret assignment to apprehend boxcar thieves working south of Walpole.

He lived with his two daughters, Roberta, 18, and Betty, 13, in the home of his mother, Mrs. Rose Foster. He had been estranged from his wife for several years

The body was found by Chester Crooks, 16, employe of a milk concern. It was lying face down, a few feet off the road.

Chief of Police Harvey Foley of Bellingham called aid of the state police and Corporal Michael Newman and Troopers Martin Daley and Jesse Carter were assigned from the Wrentham barracks

WATCH HAD STOPPED

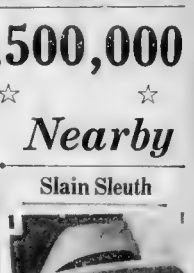
J. M. Kelly, captain of the railroad police, was also notified.

The main railroad line to Boston runs directly over the underpass where the body was found.

Two openings above furnished the possibility that Foster jumped, fell or was thrown from that point. His watch had stopped at 8.45, barely an hour before the body was found

Medical Examiner John Wyman was called to the scene and ordered the body removed to the undertaking rooms of Leslie Williams in Bellingham for autopsy.

Slain Sleuth



Alfred R. Foster of Jamaica Plain, New Haven Railroad detective, was found dead in an underpass at Bellingham with his head crushed and an empty revolver nearby.

Milton Widow, 67, Is Victim of Gas

Mrs. Edee Irene Scalder, 67, a widow, was found dead today in a gas-filled bedroom of her home at 27 Rowe st., Milton.

Her housekeeper, Mrs. Martha G Taylor, smelled gas at breakfast time and investigated. Upstairs she found her employer in the gas-filled room and called Dr. Carlton A. Rowe, who pronounced Mrs. Scalder dead. According to Mrs Taylor, the widow had been under a doctor's care for some time.

CONRAD GETS WIFE'S ESTATE

Public and private bequests of $82,500 were revealed in the will, filed in Suffolk court today by Mrs Harriette N. Conrad, wife of Rev Dr. A. Z. Conrad, pastor of Park Street Church, but none will be paid because Dr. Conrad survived her.

The will left everything to Dr Conrad, but carried the bequest provisions in case she had been the survivor.

Mrs. Conrad died May 8

Three other heirs-in-law were mentioned in the will, but none were provided for. They were Everett Mitchell of Woodland rd, Stoneham; Mrs. Emma Knight of Exeter, N. H., and Mrs. Kate Frazer of Indianapolis, Ind.

Quincy Youth Says Man Shot at Him

Alfred Rosatone, 16, of Exeter st Quincy, reported to the police that while passing through that thoroughfare on his way home early today he was approached by a tall, thin man who carried a revolver and who fired two shots at him when he ran after being commanded to halt. Police who investigated the affair could find no residents of the vicinity who heard the shots.

DUNSTAN CASE IS REOPENED

The Dunstan divorce case recently taken under advisement by Judge Colin C. Campbell, was reopened in Middlesex Probate Court today at request of Capt. Edwin V. Dunstan of West Point, who claims the trial should have been held in Michigan

Two letters, constituting what his counsel contended was additional evidence, were introduced to show Capt. Dunstan was never domiciled in this state.

Mrs. Ruth H. Dunstan of Cambridge sued Capt. Dunstan on grounds of cruel and abusive treatment, alleging attempts were made to poison her.

The only witness today was Elmer E George, assistant income tax collector of Massachusetts. He identified two letters from Capt Dunstan, in which the army officer stated he was never domiciled in any state nor intended to be

His counsel, Attorney James E Markham of Lowell told the court that Capt. Dunstan's domicile was Michigan, where he entered the army

Attorney John B Carney for Mrs. Dunstan said there was no doubt Capt. Dunstan was trying to dodge his income tax.

Judge Campbell said he would make a ruling within a week.

(This famous story has been made into a talking picture by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer with Marion Davies in the leading role.)

"I NO LONGER own one stone in this house," said Rarick, but lease it from those who do, and with the sale fo some vast lumber properties in Maine and Canada last month, I now own not one acre of God's territory, with the exception of certain colossal and indirect mortgage holdings, which, in their turn, will be converted.

"I am, of course, still a man heavily encumbered with wealth of practically every sort of valuable human possession, but already forty millions of my dollars are committed to preventative philanthropies.

"It isn't easy for a man whose bank balance has never been larger than $900 to have much of a conception of $40,000,000.

"I have endowed no cancer hospital, but have given with what I hope is the cumulative wisdom that is coming to men who have come into the phenomenal kind of wealth that is possible only in this country great fortunes toward the prevention of the disease.

"Nothing new in all this, you say. No, but look more deeply into it and see how prolonged has been the infancy of this idea. And there is but little time left for me. My money must pour back to the people in a fresh blood transfusion. I want to wrap no rags around social sores. To accomplish, I must personally administer my moneys while I live. I must die a poor man. You see that?"

"My sole heir is my daughter, Jennifer. For that reason and another equally important one, comes into no properties at my death except a life income of $5000 a year. You live on less, don't you?"

"Yes."

"Comfortably?"

"Fairly."

"She will be stripped pretty bare of the paraphernalia that has made of her some of the things we have just been discussing, Grattan."

"She will plunge like a roped steer."

"At first."

"Think of the gigantic power for good you are about to release out of the nickels and dimes of the people."

To Die Poor

"I have thought—and thought—and out of it has come my philosophy of why I must die a poor man and why this wealth that I have drawn out of the coin

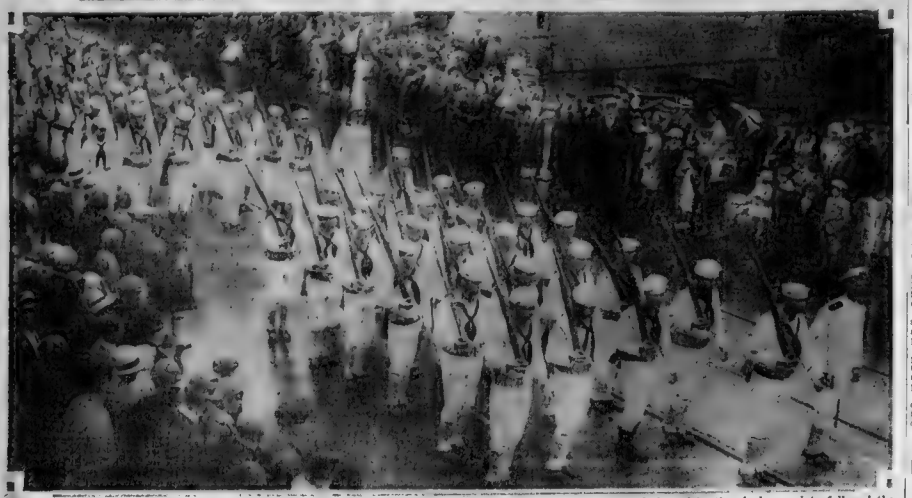
WOMAN ARRESTED ON DRUG CHARGE IN DEATH OF DR. SHAW

Uncle Sam's Sea Fighters Stepping Out for Bunker Hill Day



Here is the naval contingent from the Boston navy yard and warships now in port as they paraded today in Charlestown in the annual observance of Patriots' Day—or Bunker Hill Day. At the monument the rain, which was the only element in any way marred the celebration, had ceased to fall and the crowd got its fill of thrills as the naval, military and civic parade moved briskly through the streets. FORMER NURSE IS SECRETLY INDICTED

Whitman Man's Suicide in Cell Followed a Raid on Her Brockton Home

Brockton, June 17—Another chapter in the suicide of Dr. Thomas W. Shaw in a Whitman police cell more than two weeks ago was opened today with the arrest of Mrs. Helen B. Pease, 50, of West Rosseter st., on drug charges.

Dr. Shaw was arrested following a raid June 1 on the home of Mrs. Pease and today she was taken by State Detective Albert L. Brouillard on a secret indictment.

Mrs. Pease visited him that night and the next day he was adjudged a suicide from an overdose of morphine.

Mrs. Pease is charged with illegal possession of morphine sulphate that police said was seized in the raid. She will be arraigned in Superior Court tomorrow.

Dr. Shaw was to face a charge of illegal surgery when police found him dead. He was a friend of Mrs. Pease a former nurse.

SOJOURNERS' HAILED HERE

POISON LIQUOR DEATH HINTED

Indications that poisoned liquor caused the death of Alfred Fazioli 39, of 424 Massachusetts ave., also known as Bianco, were found by Medical Examiner Timothy Leary in an autopsy at City Hospital mortuary today.

Fazioli was taken to City Hospital from the Northampton Elevated station, after his legs had become paralyzed. He told doctors he had taken two drinks given him by an acquaintance at North Station.

After telling his story Fazioli became unconscious and died early today.

Medical Examiner Leary said a liquid, probably poisoned alcohol, was found in the stomach of Fazioli. He said he had submitted it to a chemist, and would await his report before making a finding on the cause or death.

Student Fined for Drunken Driving

Charles J. McIvin, 21, of Pennsylvania, a Harvard student rooming in Standish Hall, Cambridge, was fined $50 today in Newton court on a charge of operating an automobile while under the influence of liquor. A charge of drunkenness was filed by Judge Bacon.

McIvin was arrested early on May 28 while driving the wrong way in a one-way street at Newton Corners. In the car were three youths and three girls.

Express Kills Man Near Wellesley

John Morrisey, 35, of 379 Norfolk st., Cambridge, a section hand employed by the Boston & Albany Railroad, was instantly killed today by the North Shore Limited, an express train, while working on the tracks beyond Wellesley depot.

The train passed through Wellesley on a track other than its regular one and Morrisey, with three other workmen, received no warning of its approach, according to police.

Pensive Cow Snarls Heavy Traffic on Dudley St.

"Adele," which police of the Dudley st. station believe and hope is the last remaining cow in Roxbury, strolled from her pasture in the rear of 69 Magazine st. and injected a bit of rural simplicity into the big city life of Dudley st., yesterday.

While street cars halted at the busy corner of Dudley st., Blue Hill ave and Hampden st., and pedestrians paused in the rain, 'Adele' stood in the middle of the car track and gazed pensively around.

Special Officers James Fennessy, Herbert Jonas and Thomas J. Keans were detailed to the duty of removing one cow from the street and returning said cow to Cornelius Hyland, owner, thereby allowing much muddled traffic to untangle itself and get underway again.

SOJOURNERS IN CONVENTION

The National Sojourners, which comprise commissioned officers of the uniformed forces of the United States and are members of the Masonic order, will gather here for their 11th annual convention, tomorrow, Friday and Saturday with convention headquarters at Hotel Statler.

Included in the list of delegates are the leaders of the veteran organizations, including Rear Admiral Robert Coontz, who is national vice-commander of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, and president of the National Sojourners, and National Commander of the American Legion, Ralph T. O'Neil.

Many of the delegates and guests will motor to the North Shore tomorrow, with receptions by Masonic officials and civic authorities at Salem and Marblehead.

The program concludes at the Swampscott Ionic (Masonic Club) of which Archibald Miller is president and Major George Place is chairman of the committee.

At Swampscott, air planes representing every branch of the service, will fly in that vicinity at 5 o'clock, followed later by a spectacular scene both on land and water by powerful searchlights from naval vessels and the Ionic Club.

JURY GETS CASE OF RICHARDSON

The case of John B. Richardson, wealthy Arlington realtor and religious worker, on trial in Middlesex Superior Criminal Court in connection with the burning of a Newton building, went to the jury today.

Richardson went on trial a week and a half ago charged with burning a building January 13, with intent to injure insurers, and also with being an accessory before the fact. Yesterday Judge John M. Gibbs ordered a directed verdict of not guilty on the charge of burning the building.

The building was a large 20-room structure in Cotton st., Newton formerly the home of Thomas G. Plant, millionaire shoe manufacturer. Later it was the exclusive DeWit Clinton school for boys, but for some time had not been occupied.

The defense admitted the fire was incendiary, but denied any knowledge of it.

Economic conditions, especially relating to the world-wide depression, must find solution in a survey of international economical and political conditions if we want to find the remedy, declared Newton D. Baker, Secretary of War in the Wilson administration, in the commencement address to the graduating class of Radcliffe College today.

"We are in the midst of a world-wide depression," said he. "Not in a money panic, not a Wall St. scare, but all over the world a wave of economic depression which has turned countless thousands of people in full possession of their physical strength, in the willingness to work, and made them objects of charity and which has taken from over their heads the roofs which protected their families."

Mr. Baker, referring to some of the conditions that were caused by the world war, said a loss greater than that of human life and the enormous loss of property, is that for the first time in human history the world had lost its youth.

Further, that the youth now finds himself old almost as soon as he lays down his books and enters upon life at the completion of his college education.

"Youth has gifts to give," he said, "and it would be a very tragic thing, indeed the most tragic thing the world has had imposed upon it, if we lost the gifts that youth can give. Back of my thought, the thought I am trying to give you today, is that youth's gift is imagination, it is daring, to be willing to continue in mature life at least the experimental acquisition of knowledge, a desire to make the world more beautiful and more harmonious, a comprehension of new ideas, a willingness to try to meet them, which no older people find difficult to accomplish."

Hero Honored

STAR BOARDER SAT ON HER BED

Mrs. Laura Holmes Philpot testified today in the resumed hearing of the divorce suit of her husband, Edward F. Philpot in Norfolk Probate Court at Dedham, that she was asleep when Joseph D. Rheaume, star boarder, entered her room.

The witness, who is charged with unfaithfulness, said she first discovered Rheaume sitting on her bed, when a raiding party led by her husband, entered her Walpole home the night of February 20, 1930.

Mrs. Philpot said Rheaume had a room at the further side of the hall, and he was taken there to dress by police officers who accompanied her husband and his brother.

"I was awakened when the officers came in with my husband," she testified. "I jumped up and started getting into some clothes because I was embarrassed.

"Mr. Rheaume was sitting on the side of the bed. He wore a bathrobe over his undercloths. I didn't know he was there until I was awakened."

She denied officers had to force the door of her room after they entered the house.

In response to a question by Atty. John E. Swift, representing her husband, Mrs. Philpot said she was fond of Rheaume but had no affection for him. The case was started some time ago, but was postponed.

Milton Widow, 67, Is Victim of Gas

Mrs. Edee Irene Scalder, 67, a widow, was found dead today in a gas-filled bedroom of her home at 27 Rowe st., Milton.

Her housekeeper, Mrs. Martha O. Taylor, smelled gas at breakfast time and investigated. Upstairs she found her employer in the gas-filled room and called Dr. Carlton A. Rowe, who pronounced Mrs. Scalder dead. According to Mrs. Taylor, the widow had been under a doctor's care for some time.

BUTLER SPEAKS OVER WAAB

Maj Gen. Smedley D. Butler, stormy petrel of the United States Marine Corps, was a guest speaker last night over radio station WAAB from the broadcasting studios of the Boston Evening American.

Maj-Gen. Butler arrived in Boston yesterday to attend the "night before" banquet in the Charlestown State Armory. During the Bunker Hill Day celebration, he is the guest of the Bunker Hill Post of the American Legion.

GIRL IS HURT IN HIT-RUN CRASH

Miss Catherine Morrison, 30, of Cottage Farm rd., Brookline, suffered a broken foot and internal injuries today in a crash between two automobiles in the Jamaicaway, Jamaica Plain—one of the drivers fleeing with a disabled car.

The wrecked hit-and-run car was found abandoned a half mile away from the accident scene, with its motor no longer functioning.

Police searching the owner, went to a Huntington ave. address, but there neighbors said the man wanted had moved to another Huntington ave. apartment. At the second address, police were told the man had moved again, but these neighbors did not know the new address.

Miss Morrison was riding in the other car, operated by Charles Brown of Adams st., East Milton. He was shaken up. She was taken to Peter Bent Brigham Hospital in another machine.

DAILY TRUE STORY
THE BIG CITY TEST

A VOICE SAID PLEASANTLY, "HELLO, DEAR!"

THERE WAS a prolonged shrill scream and the noise of a machine gun let loose. Thelma Cameron gave a stifled shriek and jerked erect in bed, her arms crossed protectingly over her bosom. Then she relaxed slowly and put trembling hands over her deafened ears. It wasn't the end of the world.

Morning had come in the city, that was all. The scream was the shrill concerted blasts of seven o'clock whistles, the machine gun was the opening spat of mechanical riveters on the skeleton structure next door. Hurrying to the window she closed them tightly and pulled down the shades, but not before an overalled workman, posed on the brink of eternity, saw her and winked.

Slightly dismayed, Thelma began her dressing by electric light. She realized that when she lived in the city she would have to get used to noise, but an apartment would be more quiet than this downtown hotel. On the other hand, unless she earned a good salary, she couldn't afford the high price of quiet.

She scowled nervously at her dark, piquant face in the mirror, conscious that she was getting stage fright already, and wished she had brought Ulysses to rest here. But as it was Ulysses and home that she had run away from, that thought was fantastic.

Thelma Was Young
Musical and Ambitious

Thelma was young, pretty, musical and ambitious. She played the organ in the moving picture house, and sang in the Presbyterian Church choir, but that was the limit of her opportunities in Holly Grove. Her comfortable home and devoted mother she took for granted, for she had never known anything else. Recently the manager of the theater, a friendly old Irishman, learned that there was an opening for a good accompanist at Broadcasting Station ZXM in Ridge Crest, their nearest large city, and McGuffy had arranged for her to have a test made.

Her joy was unbounded. She laughed at her mother's words of disapproval and refused to tell Ulysses Donaldson the great news. Ulysses wanted her to marry him, and spend the remainder of her days in his big white house on the hill, helping him spend his fortune. But what use was money in a small town? Besides, Ulysses was ten years older than she, and beginning to get bald.

Looked and Smiled
Came to Wish Her Success

She glanced at her watch. It was 8 o'clock, and the test was not until 2. Trying to appear urban, she went down to the dining-room and ordered breakfast, but when it came she couldn't eat, for she was overcome with loneliness. There were people, people all around, but not a one of them knew or cared whether her test was a success or a failure. She bent her head to hide her tears, then jerked erect as a voice said pleasantly, "Hello, dear."

"However did you get here?" she marveled.

"Milk train," he answered, succinctly. "Your mother told me last night that you had gone, and McGuffy gave me the address of the hotel, so here I am." He drew out the chair opposite her and sat down.

Animosity kindled in her eyes. "You needn't have bothered," she said coldly. "I'm not going back."

Ulysses cleared his throat, and examined intently the intricate design of a tablespoon.

"Mind if I order breakfast?" he asked. "I've been up all night."

"You shouldn't have bothered," she repeated. "I told you flatly I would never marry you."

He looked at her and smiled. "I didn't come to take you back. I thought you might like to have someone in the studio while you took your test. Someone wishing you success."

"Ulysses! Do you want me to succeed?"

"Why, sure I do. Don't I love you?"

She heard only the first sentence. "Then," she cried happily, "I know I'll be all right. I've been so scared."

He beckoned the waiter. "Bring the lady some hot waffles and scrambled eggs and coffee, and me the same."

After breakfast he hired a car and they drove about the city. Disarmed by his friendly interest, she talked freely.

"If I get the job, I'll rent a tiny apartment in the suburbs where it is nice and quiet. I'll be very busy and happy, and soon I'll begin to met desirable people."

"Sounds nice," he replied heavily.

A little before 2 o'clock they arrived at the studio. She felt very little and insignificant, and was grateful for Ulysses' big bulk so protectingly close. In the outer rooms all was noisy confusion, but when she sat at the organ, in the sound-proof studio, cold silence surrounded her and the microphone was like a deadly, inhuman ear. The star whom she was to accompany came in and glanced at her disdainfully. "I'm the dust under his feet," she thought, "but I'll show him I have talent." Then she remembered a warning.

"Don't play too well," someone had said. "He's intensely jealous." How selfish and ugly everything was in the city!

Ready! A thought of Ulysses in the adjoining room came to her. "I'm rooting for you," he had said. With sureness and skill her fingers moved over the keys.

At last the test was over, and she was free to go. Gregory Amor, the star, shook hands with her, declaring that she had interpreted his moods with marvelous ability.

"We'll phone you in the morning," they told her. "Leave your number, please."

"You were great, Thelma," Ulysses assured her on the way back to the hotel. "Everybody stopped to listen while you played and they say you're sure got the job."

"Oh, I do hope so," she cried, and added, "Ulysses, I'm so tired."

"Go up to your room and rest," he advised.

"Where will you be?"

"Oh, waiting around." Then suddenly his face flushed. He leaned toward her and clasped her hand. "Thelma, if I come to the city to live, will you marry me?"

She jerked her hands away angrily. "No," she answered coldly. "And don't wait dinner for me; I will have a tray sent up to my room."

Long hours passed. Thelma dozed fitfully, but was too tired to rest, and her mind was confused by the maelstrom of jealousy, competition, noise and hurry in which she found herself submerged. Suppose she did secure the job as accompanist what honor attached to it? Amor received all the press notices, all the attention, most of the money. Besides, after hearing the organ soloist that afternoon she realized how inadequate her own preparation was. She couldn't compete with Decker, and if she was too good an accompanist Gregory Amor would fire her.

She dozed, and dreamed she was sitting in the sunshine on the top step of the porch at Ulysses's home, playing with the collie. Ulysses was approaching with a handful of pansies. She laughed and awoke. It was getting dark in the hotel room. She shivered and wished she were home. Then there came something like a tiny clap of thunder in her brain, and her muddled thought clarified. She realized in that instant that she loved Ulysses, and depended on him, and could not be happy without him.

"Oh," she cried, in glad surprise. "Oh!"

Jumping up she began smoothing her hair and making herself presentable.

"We'll take the first train home," she decided. "The test was a success, for it showed me my own mind."

DALLINGER HITS AT REDISTRICTING PLAN

DALLINGER HITS REDISTRICTING AS 'UNFAIR'
Referendum Battle Looms as Congressman Scores Slicing of Cambridge Into 4 Parts

By BERNARD J. DOHERTY

Direct encouragement of the movement to invoke the referendum on the new congressional redistricting law was given today by Congressman Frederick W. Dallinger of Cambridge.

Back from an eight weeks' tour of Europe, Congressman Dallinger denounced the redistricting law as "reprehensible" and the "work of political boy scouts."

"The people of Cambridge are rightly indignant at this political vivisection of our city," he said.

"In my 40 years in public life, 16 of them as a member of Congress, I have never known of a more reprehensible bill becoming law than the redistricting bill.

"It is the work of political boy scouts. A leadership which would engineer an iniquitous gerrymander resulting in the dismemberment of Cambridge, in population less than one-half of one congressional district, into parts of four different districts should be repudiated by the voters."

MUCH DISSATISFACTION

While there has been dissatisfaction with the new law in various parts of the state, the bulk of the opposition is centered in the University City. There the Democrats as well as the Republican drys are up in arms.

Since the signing of the bill, the local Republicans and Democratic forces have come together again with the single purpose of obstructing the operation of the law. Announcement was made that initial steps would be taken shortly to start the referendum machinery.

LONG BATTLE LOOMS

Atty. Warren Patten, law partner of Dallinger, agreed to handle the legal end. Apparently, the movement wasted only an affirmative word from Congressman Dallinger that word is now given.

The fact that the Supreme Court in 1926 refused a similar petition when the state senatorial, representative and councillor districts were reconstructed as well as congressional districts, has not discouraged the present movement.

It is held that the court at that time did not go into the legal aspect of the matter and that the unwilling reason for the decision was the great confusion which would have resulted. It is contended now that a new redistricting could be made early in January in plenty of time for the election.

It is expected that when the initial petition is filed with Secretary of State Frederic W. Cook he will refuse to certify it, basing his action on the previous decision.

Legal steps will then start and, if necessary, it is said the matter will be taken to the United States Supreme Court.

It is known that the referendum idea has the support of some Democrats, including Charles H. McGlue, former chairman of the Democratic State Committee, and Edward J. Sennott, chairman of the Cambridge city committee.

300 CHILDREN ON OUTING

Over 300 boys and girls, members of the Holy Name Catholic Club of the Holy Name Church, West Roxbury, went on their annual outing today to Fieldston, Brant Rock, despite the rain.

The group, which was taken in five buses and 16 automobiles, will spend the day in contests and games under the direction of Roy Christie, chairman of sports. After dinner there will be a swimming exhibition by the Morison sisters of Brookline. Kenneth H. Brewer is chairman of the field day, which is being actively managed by Fr. Joseph Quigley, spiritual advisor of the club.

Cop on Way to Work Nabs Liquor Seller

Patrolman Cornelius Curran of the Lynn police liquor squad, went to work before he arrived at work today—and scored in a bit of an alley work.

The liquor officer said he peeked into an alley off Union st. and saw Henry McIntyre of Spring st. selling a pint of liquor. Two other pints are alleged to have been found on McIntyre when he was booked in Lynn police headquarters for illegally selling.

RAINFALL SETS NEW RECORD OF 8.59 INCHES
73-Year-Old Mark for June Is Shattered; Storm May Pass to Sea Tonight

With a mark of 8.59 inches of rain for the month so far, all June records were broken today. The precipitation soared toward new heights in intermittent downpours through the day that drenched Bunker Hill Day celebrations.

Little hope was given either for the events scheduled tonight, the rains due to continue until late tonight or early in the morning, according to the weather man.

The last 36 hours, up to 8 a. m. today, produced 3.16 inches of rain sending the mark to 8.59 inches, and more than two weeks to go.

That was a full half-inch over the mark of 8.09 for the entire month, reached in 1858.

Today's storm centered over the Rhode Island coast and Nantucket, but gave promises of sweeping southeastward and out to sea.

FIREMEN SAVE 'WIRE SITTER'

Brockton, June 17 — Ralph D'Agostino's quest for tight wire sitting honors ended abruptly today amidst police gongs and fire sirens after he collapsed from the stunt.

Charles D'Agostino, brother and manager of the 29-year-old contortionist, was arrested in an excitement when he confessed he sounded a fire alarm to get help. He was later released after explanations.

D'Agostino sat on the wire for 50 hours, starting at 3 o'clock Monday afternoon. He sat 34 days on a flagpole last summer.

At 2 o'clock this morning he called to his brother that he felt weak. With no telephone handy, Charles sounded a fire alarm that brought engines, ladder trucks, combinations, an assistant chief and 4 police patrol.

Ralph was treated in Brockton Hospital for exposure and later went home.

Boom! Bang! Toll

ROBERT RUSSELL

DENNIS MAINEY

Among early casualties of the annual fireworks toll were Robert Russell, 8, of Polk st., and Dennis Mainey, 12, of Stone st., both of Charlestown. They were severely injured when struck by torpedoes. Robert was taken to Haymarket Relief Station and Dennis to City Hospital.

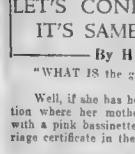
LET'S CONFESS THE TRUTH—IT'S SAME OLD LOVE GAME

By HELEN ROWLAND

"WHAT IS the girl of today coming to?"

Well, if she has her way, she is coming to the same station where her mother got off—a two-by-four apartment, with a pink bassinette in the corner and an embossed marriage certificate in the lower bureau drawer.

She may shrug her shoulders at marriage, and vehemently protest against the idea of being "owned" by any man. But don't let her bluff you. She is just as determined to OWN a MAN herself, some day, as her mother was.



HELEN ROWLAND.

Times, customs and haircuts may change, but you can't change biology nor the workings of the human heart.

Today's daughter says, "No wedding bells for me!"

Her mother said, "I am wedded to my career!"

But it's the same old habit, dear heart, with which to house a man's fighting spirit and BACK him into marriage.

She may speak a different language. But the universal language of love is, now and always, a KISS.

And a kiss is the same old mixture of doubt, thrills, curiosity, perfume, stale cigarettes, hope and disappointment, as ever.

Feminine methods may have altered, the net and the snare have been camouflaged to resemble a golf stick, and an arrow. But the old love of the chase, and the masculine desire to do his OWN "pursuing" is still man's ruling passion.

A man may like a frank, snappy, hail-fellow petting partner for a holiday afternoon, but she doesn't make his head swim, nor cause his heart to skip a single beat. Today, as always, it's not what he DOESN'T know.

It may be a great deal easier to get a man to MAKE love to you in these chummy days, but it's just as hard as ever to make him really LOVE you.

You can change the shade of your hair and the shape of your nose—but you never can change the color of the human eye, nor the masculine viewpoint. Nor the rules of the love game!

And, what every woman wants today, yesterday and forever—what she wants more than anything else in the world—is LOVE!

Don't let her bluff you! Her game may be played with a heavier, bolder and far less skilful stroke—but it's the same old LOVE GAME!

Larry Hears Why Mary Lou Fled

LARRY WAS asted not to hear the lecture, and incidentally lost his job on that account, as the lecture turned out to be what is vulgarly known as hot stuff, and all the other papers carried columns of highly amused print about the languid gentleman in sartorial splendor who lounged onto the platform and spoke of the Inhibitinz of American Women due to their Puritanical Forbears.

For in the corridor of that hotel he met Mary Lou.

She was trying to turn; to escape. But he had her by the arm.

"Not so fast my good child!"

He looked about him espied a deserted library, led her into it and plumped her down in a chair with no ceremony whatever.

"What are you doing here?"

"Living here, Larry," she said. "And what else, may I ask?" he demanded sternly.

"Taking a course in a secretarial school," she replied, with some defiance.

"Do you realize that Jenny, Mrs. Lorrimer and I have been combing the town for you?"

"No, Larry. I promised Jenny I'd let her know where I was. I fully intended to—later," she pleaded.

"We don't believe you. A Mary Lou in the hand is worth two in the bush—" he said.

That made him think of Delight. He said, quickly

"Before you open your mouth to ask questions or make any more trouble let me tell you this. Delight Harford returned to England. She happens to be married to a gentleman in Australia. That was what she was going to tell you when you were so rudely interrupted the other day . . ."

"Married!" asked Mary Lou, faintly.

She was hatless, and her gold hair curled as entrancingly as ever. But she was pale, thought Larry, and rather thin, and her eyes were darkly shadowed. He felt a pang of affectionate, impatient compassion for her. He still held her arm, as he feared she would escape him even now.

"You're going upstairs and pack. And coming to Jenny's with me—tonight!" said Larry magnificently, forgetting his literary errand.

"No, Larry—please, it's awfully dear of Jenny to want me, but I can't."

"You're coming. If I have to make a scene . . . right here. I take no chances of your checking out and going somewhere else before tomorrow. And—Lorrimer's not at Westwood. He's in the Adirondacks. He went to see McElwan and is staying at Wynne's camp up there indefinitely. You won't see him. Just come out with me for a few days—hang your secretarial course—and get straightened out. Jenny has been frantic about you, and so has Mrs. Lorrimer. You owe it to her, Mary Lou, to see her again, if only once. I suppose I understand why you went off like that: I don't much blame you, but I do feel that Mrs. Lorrimer is deeply hurt and terribly worried."

"I'll come, Larry," agreed Mary Lou, wretchedly.

The tears were pouring unchecked down the small face She had been so unhappy The days in New York, strange, lonely, filled with heartbreak. The seeming vastness of the hotel. The feeling herself a stranger, threatened, somehow on all sides The cold practicality of the business school. The longing for Lorrimer The wondering if she had done right. The imagination that wouldn't let her rest, picturing Lorrimer and Delight, happy, reunited

Larry took out a large handkerchief, something like a sheet, and mopped her face for her in a brotherly fashion. He then helped her to her feet and escorted her to the elevator and took up his position there waiting determinedly like a detective, until she should come down again. He was taking no chance whatever. When she reappeared he accompanied her to the desk, watched her check out, and taking her arm, led her to the door the street, a taxi, the station, and a train for West'mill

In the train he talked to her severely.

"Why the devil did you run away?" he demanded

"I couldn't face him—"

WOOLENS FOR SPORTS

Simple Little Roll Collar

SKETCHED IN PARIS

Yankee Girl in London Who Wanted to 'Jazz 'Em Up!'

By WINIFRED BLACK

THE TEA ROOM of the London hotel was crowded, but there wasn't a sound to be heard except the rattle of china, the soft tinkle of silver, and now and again the padded footfall of the servants who served the tea with the air of devotees, managing an ancient and solitary rite

A smart looking, middle-aged officer—he was not in uniform but you could see the mark of the shoulder strap on his broad, straight shoulders—sat quite alone, pouring his tea as an ancient priest must have poured holy sacrifice upon the altar

So much cream—relatively—one lump of sugar—exactly—such and such a measure of amber tea—exactly.

The cup lifted with a measured dignity

A little group of men and women near him went through the same sacred rite

A hushed orchestra played quiet music from a hushed corner

A girl at a table in a little nook where she could look out and see the show, set down her cup with the air of one who has just had a great white light borne in upon her

She was smartly dressed—much more smartly dressed than the other women in the room—her voice was not as sweet as the voices of the other women, her manner was a trifle too aggressive, too self-assured, too confident

And what a bright pair of eyes she had, and what a look of keen intelligence

"More butter for you, miss," murmured the waiter, with a look of patient resignation

These Americans the butter they ate and the cream they demanded.

"Yes, thank you," said the American girl, "and a little more cream if you please."

Winifred Black

"Yes, miss," sighed the English waiter, and he moved to execute his duty, with a look of one who treads alone a path of conscious misery.

"I understand it—at last! said the American girl)

"They are all bored in tears that's why they love it so

"The English love to be bored

"They hate to be disturbed by any sudden thought, or any quick emotions

"Now, I'd love to push that piano player off the stool, and do a little jazz playing just to wake them up

"I wonder just how much of a fine I'd have to pay for disturbing the peace?

"That's the reason they dislike us so I guess—we're always disturbing the peace, we Americans

"I'm going to try to learn to love to be bored—then I can go back home and sit on the front porch every single evening all through July and have Harry next door play the same tunes on the same ukulele—every single evening, all through the rest of the summer

"And that will make mama and papa very happy."

I wonder if the American girl will keep her word or will she run away and marry the man nobody knows, and be glad of it for the sake of a few weeks of delirious happiness, no matter how miserable she is all the rest of her life?

Youth the Keynote of Frocks

By PARIS BUREAU

PARIS, June 17—The little frock continues to loom large on the sartorial horizon. Although every well planned and well stocked wardrobe includes several afternoon dresses and ensembles most of us find that we get the most wear and use out of the simple little frock that is at home for all but formal occasions. Such frocks are very much in demand by every type of woman, be her hours replete with business or social obligations

Youthfulness is the keynote of the simple frock and this of course adds to its popularity Again every house devotes a large portion of its collection to these useful little frocks and to the clever little sports and semi-sports frocks that are of increasing importance the season over.

This type of frock is ideal for we king and for general town wear as well as for country wear and for use en route, and so it is no wonder that so many versions of the theme are to be had. But despite the variety the essential simplicity and true look of the frock is never for a moment obscured, at least not by a smart designer

Girl Says 'He Acts Funny on Phone'

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

Still in my teens, I go around with a boy who will graduate this year. He likes me and I like him. He doesn't drink, swear or smoke, and is very highly thought of. He gave me his graduation ring and is very good to me, but he has two faults One, when I call him up, he acts funny like he very cross over the phone (Ha lives with his sister.) And second, he can't stand teasing He was up several times last week, and Sunday night I called him up. He acted funny so I hung up. Today at school neither of us spoke. Won't you please help me. I am crazy over him. PUZZLED

Dear Puzzled: Older people with boys and girls in the family are often annoyed by the constant ringing of the telephone, and do not hesitate to make fun of the talk they overhear. Perhaps the boy friend has had some such criticism to contend with at home and that's why he acts "funny." As for not speaking, that's foolish. I hope your misunderstanding has been settled by this time.

Shall She Invite Him?

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX

I am a constant reader of your precious columns and profit by your answers. I would like to know if it would be quite all right to invite a young man, whom I have not seen for some months, to my party. We used to go together quite often and then he stopped coming to see me. My cousin who is president of his neighborhood has seen nothing of him either. I would appreciate it very much if you would let me know what to do. Please answer. SINGER

BLUE PLATE SPECIALS AT HOME

By MARTHA LEE.

From Martha Lee's Wednesday Morning Broadcast Over Station WAAB

"BLUE PLATE specials" are just as popular and practical served at home as they are in your favorite restaurant and father will whoop with joy to get out of the job of carving. I know.

Martha Lee

We had two unexpected guests and the duck looked as though it had shrunk considerably in the oven, and so, rather than risk letting the man of the house deal too generously with the three servings, leaving the wish bone and the neck for himself and me, I dissected the critter out in the kitchen and by fair and judicious apportioning and generous servings of Betty's delicious dressing managed so that every one was satisfied I don't think many of us are stingy by nature, but when emergencies do arise and a given quantity must be stretched further than expected, these blue plates are really heaven-sent. A little looks like a lot arranged in the three compartments.

In selecting units for a blue plate special, try to plan attractive color contrasts A chuck pot roast with nice brown gravy, mashed potatoes, buttered carrots with peas or asparagus is a colorful and economical combination, especially if you top it off with a fruit salad, coffee and cheese crackers

Hamburg steak cakes, wrapped in bacon slices and broiled, are delicious served with macaroni and cheese, spinach and Harvard beets. Whole wheat bread should be served with this, and fresh raspberry pie with whipped cream is not to be despised for dessert

Baked pork chops with tomato sauce, baked potato opened up and with a square of butter dropped in and a sprinkling of paprika, and diced buttered turnips with parsley are a nice combination, with a cabbage salad and cream dressing. Orange layer cake and coffee are a good dessert for this combination

Then there are broiled lamb chops with pickled pears, parsley potatoes, broiled tomatoes and broiled asparagus with rye bread For dessert, jelled fruit, with cookies

Recipes for any of these dishes will go to you by fast mail, if you'd like to have them

Faithfully yours,

Martha Lee

Sunlight and Growing Child

By DR. R. S. COPELAND

ABUNDANT sunlight is of tremendous importance in the development of an infant. Like a flower, the child thrives and blossoms in its presence and withers in its absence.

Dr. Copeland

Sunlight is absolutely necessary for the proper growth of a baby. Though food may be plentiful, without sunlight the body cannot properly utilize the food.

It is a well known fact that absence of sunlight or its substitute, cod liver oil, produces a condition children know as rickets. This disease is characterized by poor development of the bones by flabby muscles of the body and marked undernourishment.

Years before the actual value of sunlight was understood it was customary to feed cod liver oil to all children. Today, with our knowledge of the ultra-violet ray and the place of the vitamins, very little cod liver oil is necessary.

It is important to remember that sunlight is only beneficial when the rays actually reach the skin. Window glass and clothing keep out the beneficial rays. When tanning of the skin occurs, one can be assured that the beneficial part of the rays reached the body.

Sun baths may be given to an infant as early as the third or fourth week. The child should not be exposed too suddenly.

The first treatment may be for three minutes to the front of the body and three minutes to the back. The length of exposure may be gradually increased until the baby has a coat of tan. Then for a half hour or more he may frolic in the sun without any clothes.

I am often asked as to whether or not the sunlight is injurious to the eyes. As long as the rays do not strike the eyes directly there is no injury. When the child is very young, as in the first month of life, it is well to keep the face turned away from the sun while giving a sun bath.

Also, please remember that a sun bath may be given indoors The child is placed in a crib near the open window. The crib is so placed that the sun rays fall upon the child

NEW ENGLAND RAILS READY FOR AIR LINES

By FRANK H. MELOON

Three New England railroads are considering the addition of air lines. The Boston & Maine and the Maine Central may link Boston, Portland and Bangor via the sky routes. Several makes of airplanes have been considered for the service to date. The Boston & Maine at the suggestion of Gerrit Fort then vice president was the first railroad in the country to add bus service, when the automotive competition came into being.

New Haven's air service, not tentatively considered, would include coastwise stops at Providence, New London and other centers. President L. F. Loree of the Delaware & Hudson recently expressed his opposition to the carriers going into aviation but Mr. Loree's voice is only one among many.

Atlantic Deeper Waterways Association is to hold its convention in Boston during the week of October 5. Manager Frank S. Davis of the Maritime Association of the Boston Chamber of Commerce representing Mayor Curley and the chamber won the many cornered fight to secure the convention. The committee handling plans for the reception consists of Gerrit Fort, Capt. Eugene E. O'Donnell, E. W. Wakeman, Arthur J. Doyle, J. Stewart Murphy, C. L. F. Aleci and Frank S. Davis.

The Atlantic Deeper Waterways Assn. came to the front more than 25 years ago largely through the efforts of the late Oliver Frisbee of Portsmouth, N. H., then conducting thriving hotels at the famous Isles of Shoals and in Florida. The old Parker House was a favorite meeting place of the Waterways' leaders. Our first meeting with Gifford Pinchot, the National Forester, which is a public office not connected with the well-known beneficial society, was at an Atlantic Deeper Waterways session at the Parker House.

The Deeper Waterways people had a route planned by which you could, as we recall it, travel over fresh water inland about all the way from Boston to Florida. The advantages were scenic as well as "anti-seasickness," and of course not limited to those mentioned.

In this column yesterday it was stated:

"We hear Radio Keith has arranged $6,000,000 financing, privately."

Wall Street Journal today says:

"Reported that arrangements have been practically completed for provision of $6,000,000 in cash for Radio-Keith-Orpheum Corp., the funds to come from private sources. Plan of expansion, to be consummated as company decides conditions are propitious, together with a budget of increased expenditures for improvement of properties, is understood to be almost completed. New funds would be used for these purposes."

Tuesday we mentioned improvements pending for the Cape Cod canal. A Boston Chamber of Commerce communication reaches us, stating:

"The Maritime Association of the Boston Chamber of Commerce has appealed to New England governors, senators and congressmen and the principal port and business organizations of this section, urging them to do all in their power to have Congress take prompt action in approving the recommendations of the board of engineers, War Department, for the improvement of the Cape Cod canal.

"Estimated cost of the improvement is $23,250,000 with $250,000 annual maintenance. Provides lock canal 110 feet wide, 100 feet long with 40-foot depth over sills, certain improvements in Buzzards Bay approach, and single overhead bridge in place of present two highway bridges."

President H. T. Parson of Woolworth's declared today before sailing for his annual trip to Europe that the company's business reported from all sections of the country showed gratifying improvement. He said this should be taken as a definite indication that business generally, as gauged by Woolworth sales, had turned the corner and was on the upward trend. In the first week in June he said, Woolworth sales showed an increase of $391,000 over the similar week of June, 1930.

Today's News of Live Stocks in Wall Street

After an irregular opening, in which gains and losses were well distributed over the active list, the stock market firmed up this morning and many of the favorites sold for a time slightly above Tuesday's closing levels.

Dullness was the outstanding characteristic of the market. For the first time since June, 1926, trading fell under a million shares for the full session.

Small Reaction in Rails Is Staged

Near the noon period the rail stocks led the market in a slight reaction, led by Baltimore & Ohio and New York Central.

Market Ignores Railroad Petition

The stock market paid little or no attention most of the day to the filing of the railroads petition with the Commerce Commission for a 15 per cent increase in rates and was equally indifferent to a new 2 per cent shrinkage in steel production, which brings the current operating rate of the industry as a whole to 38 per cent of mill capacity.

Favorites Make but Little Effort

General Electric, United Corporation, Chrysler Motors and a small number of yesterday's bull leaders today made only a feeble effort to continue their advance.

No Disposition to Move From Rut

Fractional changes were recorded in the favorites in all sections of the list much of today's session, and the market as a whole showed no disposition to move out of the rut into which it has been placed by the shrinkage in outside interest.

Newmont Is Lower on Dividend Cut

Newmont Mining was again influenced today by the omission of the dividends, soon selling at 23½, a new record low. The shares this year sold at a high of 58¼. The record high of 276 was reached in 1929. Newmont's interest in the copper companies has been confined to the low cost producers, so that an improvement in the copper situation would benefit Newmont proportionately more than would an interest in higher cost producers.

Mead Johnson Is Aided by Extra

Mead Johnson was at a new high today on the recovery when it sold at 89, up 3¼. Company recently declared the usual extra dividend of 50 cents in addition to the regular quarterly dividend of 75 cents. Total disbursements in 1930 were $12, against earnings for the year of $9.51 a share.

Contend Market Action Satisfactory

Conservative observers contended that the market had acted satisfactorily under existing circumstances. They have not changed their attitude and still favor careful accumulation on a scale during reactions with the protection of stop orders.

Business Machines Earnings Growth

Earnings of International Business Machines recorded uninterrupted growth until 1931. In the first quarter of this year net income was $1,830,863, compared with $1,797,631 in the same period of 1930. Per share earnings did not come up to those of 1930 because of the fact that the company paid a stock dividend of 5 per cent early in January, which increased the number of outstanding shares. Volume of business to date is said to have been satisfactory.

Continental Can's Foreign Business

That Continental Can is likely to expand its foreign business is the belief in quarters close to the company. The consumption of canned fruits and vegetables in England alone has increased by leaps and bounds in the past five years, making that one of the important fields, with indications of further growing in the future. Continental controls a British subsidiary which is planning to acquire control of the British Can Co., Ltd.

Canadian Pacific and the Crops

Canadian Pacific has not moved ahead in proportion to the domestic rails in the recent strong periods. This was due to the fact that liquidation has come into the stock right along based on the uncertainties of crops in Canada and their effect on earnings of the road. The condition of 80 per cent reported for Canadian spring wheat is the lowest since crop reporting started in 1929, and compares with 97 per cent last year.

First National Stores' Profits

Profits of First National Stores have exhibited strong resistance to the general depression in trade. For the year ended March 31, last net earnings were $5.07 a share against $5.30 in preceding 12 months. The decline in net amounted to only 4 per cent. Interests well-informed on company's affairs contend that a much better showing would have been made but for the inventory adjustments which were deemed necessary by the management because of lower foodstuffs.

It has been stated that but for this adjustment the net income would have been $1,000,000 greater, equal to better than $1 a share on the common stock. Latest sales report for the four weeks ended May 23 showed a decrease of only 1.87 per cent from the same period last year.

25 P. C. Woolworth Dividend Planned?

A commission house claims to have received information from a source which has been absolutely correct in Woolworth in the past that the management is planning to declare a stock dividend of 25 per cent and to increase the cash dividend after the company has received the increase in assets which will come to it with the completion of the Woolworth plan in England.

New Interests in Company's Affairs

In connection with this reports stated new interests have become identified with the company's affairs, but official confirmation is lacking. The Warner financing is believed to have been furnished by individuals friendly with the management. The arrangements made by both organizations is expected to carry them through the slack production period of mid-year and into the fall with ample capital to resume studio operations on a more active scale.

COMMODITIES SHOW BETTER BEHAVIOR

New York, June 17—Those who look to commodity prices as the most important of the so-called economic barometers have reason for at least slight encouragement in the behavior of important groups commodities in the wholesale markets.

Not that the drop in prices has been universally arrested. Oil, copper and farm products are still scraping the bottom of the sharpest decline in history and many wholesalers and jobbers would consider themselves fortunate to receive what they paid for tons of goods of various kinds.

The big oil companies are still on the warpath, endeavoring by price slashing to eliminate weak competition and to place cheap gasoline and oil in the channels of consumption as soon as possible. Using up of these old supplies and the cessation of cheap crude oil output from the flush fields will sooner or later pave the way for more prosperous conditions in the oil industry.

A staggering drouth or a calamitous crop failure is a poor peg on which to hang the hopes and prospects of a rally in prices of wheat, corn and cotton. There has been distress enough in the great agricultural sections of the country, without increasing it by the drouth which is now threatening to burn up the wheat fields of the Dakotas and Western Canada.

But a drouth frequently comes under the head of modified evil, since it helps to bring about a rise in prices of the balance of the crop in much larger amounts than the losses of the farmer. Relief from suffering can be provided both by the farmer himself through crop rotation and substitution, and by outside agencies which have been heavily called upon in the last two years.

For the first time in several months, a seven-day price comparison of forty major commodities by Standard Statistics Company reveals an excess of advances over declines and the same was true of the results of comparisons made by Dun's Review.

TRANSAMERICA CHECKS SENT

New York, June 17—Checks have been sent out to subscribers to the management pool formed in Transamerica stock last December. The checks refunded the sums subscribed plus 4 per cent interest on the money.

A letter accompanying the checks states that in view of the situation in the securities and financial markets, the managers of the syndicate, after the pool had been formed with a capital somewhere around $20,000,000, found it inadvisable to employ the resources along the lines originally contemplated and that their decision not to use the money was subsequently justified by events. So they took the $20,000,000 and deposited it in the bank.

The "pool" was formed Dec. 15. The managers of the syndicate were A. P. Giannini, Elisha Walker, L. M. Giannini, P. C. Hale and James A. Bacigalupi. Transamerica owners were solicited to supply cash to be used to support the falling market in Transamerica stock.

Transamerica stock was strong today. That the managers of the "pool" should turn back $20,000,000 which they could have held for another six months was taken to indicate that they had plenty of other resources to use in case the stock needed support.

General Steel to Pay Bond Interest

New York, June 17—General Steel Castings Corp. reports net loss after all charges for first quarter this year of $532,716. The semi-annual interest coupons of General Steel Castings Corp 5½ per cent series "A" gold bonds, due July 1, 1949, will be payable July 1 in New York city at the office of J. P. Morgan & Co., 23 Wall st.

Gen. Fireproofing Business Gaining

Youngstown, O., June 17—General Fireproofing officials report further improvement in business, the betterment in sales of office equipment appearing in various sections. Current operations are at 70 per cent with a slight increase during the summer probable.

$200,000 Paid for Seat on Exchange

'L' SHARES ARE FIRM IN DULL DEALINGS

Boston Elevated shares were firm in dull dealings on the Boston Stock Exchange today. Common, preferred and first preferred were fractionally higher. The remainder of the list was mostly lower, with Torrington dipping over a point to a new low for the year.

Rails were soft. Atchison dropped over three points and New Haven was down 1¼. American Telephone, Nash, New England Telephone and Quincy Mining showed losses of minor proportions.

Edison was strong, gaining 2 points. First National Stores was fractionally higher.

Paine, Webber & Co. announce that Eugene M. Weeks of Andover has joined their organization to represent them in the vicinity of Lawrence and Haverhill.

Chevrolet Sales Show Large Gain

Detroit, June 17—Registrations of Chevrolet cars in Detroit in 10 days of June exceeded the entire month of June 1930, and showed an increase of 128 per cent over the like 10 days of 1930. Dealers' reports, substantiated by a careful survey of conditions, indicate Chevrolet's business in this city during June will exceed June, 1930, by 100 per cent.

Brown Boveri Is Changing Its Name

Stockholders of American Brown Boveri Electric Corp. approved proposal to sell all of the assets of its electrical subsidiary to Allis-Chalmers Manufacturing Co. for $600,000 cash and 62,000 shares of Allis-Chalmers stock. Change in name to New York Shipbuilding Corp was also approved.

Gold From Peru

Corn Products Has Sales Holding Up

At the time when seasonally some sales recession should be strongly under way, sales of Corn Products Refining Co have been holding up steadily. In spite of falling raw material prices, net earnings for the second quarter, subject to June estimate, should be substantially ahead of the first three months.

SCORES TERMS OF VACUUM OIL PACT

Los Angeles, June 17—Commenting on reports that the Barneson interests were actively opposing the proposed merger between Standard Oil Co. of New York and Vacuum Oil Co., Lionel Barneson, now a member of Walsh, O'Connor & Barneson, and formerly president of General Petroleum Corp., said he had personally advised friends and business associates who had asked his advice not to deposit their stock as assenting to a merger.

He declared he did not think the one-for-three projected basis of exchange of shares an equitable one for Standard stockholders.

Barneson interests, he said, would not be inclined to deposit their stock under the present arrangement. In his opinion the offer will be on a basis of exchange of one share of Vacuum for two of Standard, but a fairer basis would be two for three, and he said it is likely the final basis will be somewhere between these two estimates.

CORDAGE GOES ON FULL TIME

Plymouth Cordage Co. has received an export order calling for some 75 cars of 500-foot binder twine, extinguishing its stock of this type of twine. In order to build up a normal stock, operations will be advanced to full time at both its American and Canadian plants 48 hours ... historic Plymouth ... at Welland, Ont. Recently the Plymouth plant has been running 25 hours weekly and the Canadian plant at corresponding curtailment.

The export order will warrant full-time operation for two or three weeks. At the end of that time an appraisal of crop conditions will be necessary in order to determine whether full time may be continued.

U. S. Exports in May at Low Mark

Washington, June 17 (INS)—Exports from the United States in May, amounting to $225,000,000, were the lowest in any month since October, 1914, the Commerce Department announced today.

Imports of $152,000,000 during the month were the lowest since last February. Exports for the month showed decline of $115,000,000 from the same month in 1930, while imports dropped off $102,000,000 from May, 1930, and about $3,200,000 from April.

Curb Market Is Moderately Lower

New York, June 17—Curb market displayed a generally sagging tone today, which established a new record for dullness for the past year or two. With few exceptions stocks dropped back to moderately lower levels.

A sharp break in Vacuum Oil, which slumped over 4 points on a report that the merger terms with Standard Oil of New York would undergo a change, was a particularly unsettling factor in late dealings.

Farr Alpaca Co.'s Dividend Ordered

Farr Alpaca Co declared a quarterly dividend of $1 per share, payable June 30 to stock of record June 20. This is the same as declared three months ago when the dividend was reduced from an $8 annual basis to a $4 basis.

Grain Trend Is Up at Chicago's Close

Chicago, June 17—The grain trend was upward at today's close. Wheat finished irregular at ½ cent decline to ⅛ cent advance; corn unchanged to ⅛ higher, oats unchanged, and provisions showing 2 cents to 15 cents gain.

Cotton Lower in New York Market

New York, June 17—Cotton futures today closed barely steady, 5 to 9 points lower. July, 8.74-75, October, 9.12-13, December, 9.36-37, January, 9.47, March, 9.65-66, May, 9.88. Spot quiet, middling, 9.90.

RAILS LOWERED AS RATE JUMP IS SOUGHT

Trading was in the slimmest volume seen since 1926, although it quickened a little in the final dealings.

RAILS ARE HEAVY

The rail issues were conspicuously heavy, coincident with the emergency petition filed with the Interstate Commerce Commission requesting a 15 per cent increase in freight rates, and the formation of a committee by insurance companies and savings banks to protect their railroad investments.

A weak feature in the final dealings, however was Westinghouse Electric, which broke more than 3 points to the lowest since 1934.

The market had shown signs of stiffening until fresh selling appeared in Westinghouse. Atchison declined about 4 points and New York Central nearly as much.

Issues losing a point or two included U. S. Steel, American Telephone, American Can, Bethlehem, Pennsylvania, Baltimore & Ohio, Northern Pacific, Case and Electric Autolite. Sales aggregated about 900,000 shares.

HOW SALES COMPARE

Today's transfers of only 900,000 shares compares with 1931's biggest day to date of 5,300,000 shares, traded on Februayr 24.

Last year the smallest day was 1,090,210 shares, traded on August 1, and the largest was 8,279,260, traded on May 5. The record volume in the history of the stock exchange was October 29, 1929, when 16,410,030 shares were traded

The stock exchange's first big day was in 1901, in which year it had its first 3,000,000 share day. For many years thereafter, the average turnover was well below a 1,000,000 shares. The smallest full day in 1926 was 591,300 shares. Trading began to ex and with the bull market in 1927, however, and reached its peak in the crash of late 1929.

Today's small turnover was to the accompaniment of a downward drift of share values, several prominent issues losing $1 to more than $2 a share. On the whole, the price movement was narrow.

N. J. PUBLIC'S PROFITS UP

The report of Public Service Corporation of New Jersey and subsidiaries for May, 1931, shows gross earnings of $11,843,849 against $11,277,439 in May, 1930, an increase of $66,410, while net income from operations totaled $3,531,910 against $3,347,670, an increase of $184,240.

The balance available for dividends and surplus amounted to $2,218,695 for May against $2,092,957 in the same month last year, an increase of $125,738.

For 12 months ended May 31, 1931, gross earnings were $138,276,208, against $138,623,440 for the previous year, an increase of $52,768, while net income from operations amounted to $44,887,392, against $42,603,476, an increase of $2,284,016.

The balance available for dividends and surplus amounted to $31,365,333 for the 12 months ended May 31, against $30,525,820 for the previous year, an increase of $839,513.

Underwood Elliott Has New Machine

New York, June 17—Underwood Elliott Fisher Co. announces new model standard typewriter, following closely the production of its four millionth standard typewriter. This is the company's fourth new model this year in its major lines the others including an electric bookkeeping machine, an accounting machine and a new portable typewriter. Distribution of new standard typewriter will start immediately.

Machine & Foundry Business Is Larger

New York, June 17—New business booked by American Machine & Foundry Co. in first four months of 1931 was in excess of that booked in the like period of 1930. Most of this, however, will not be completed until second half-year, so that it will be reflected in earnings for that period, and not in the first six months of the year.

Briggs Adding to Working Forces

Briggs Manufacturing Co. is adding to its working forces and stepping up production as a result of increased schedules from Chrysler Corporation on Plymouth bodies. Briggs supplies all Plymouth bodies.

Sheet Steel Prices in Chicago Higher

Chicago, June 17—Sheet steel producers in the Chicago district have raised prices $2 to $3 a ton to conform with the schedule recently announced by the American Rolling Mill Co.

Willys-Overland Bonds Are Called

Toledo, O., June 17—President Miller of Willys-Overland Co. said directors today will call $1,000,000 of the 6½ per cent bonds. Details of the retirement will be announced later.

Halts Lead Smelting

American Smelting & Refining Co. will close its lead smelters at Murray, Utah, and East Helena, Montana, during July, August and September.

FINDS BUYING BROADENED

Peoria, Ill., June 17—Distributor and dealer shelves are bare and the average family has resumed replacing worn-out necessities, the best advance signs of resumption in general buying, according to Silas H. Altorfer, president of Altofer Bros. Company.

President Altofer's own company, maker of washers and ironers and the electrotable for mechanizing kitchen operations, has invaded a new price field and made a bid for extra business with a new porcelain enamel washer which dispenses with a wringer by spinning clothes dry for the line instead.

Non-electrified home business will be sought with a gas engine model, first of its kind.

Granby Is Fourth Copper to Reduce

New York, June 17 (AP)—Granby Consolidated Mining, Smelting & Power Co., Ltd., directors today ordered disbursement of a dividend of 25 cents a share. In the preceding quarter, 50 cents was paid. This is the fourth copper company to curtail dividend disbursements in the past two days. It follows reductions by American Smelting and Howe Sound and ommission by Newmont Mining

Bethlehem Steel Prices Advanced

Bethlehem Steel Corp. has advanced sheet prices from $1 to $5 a ton, according to the product. There has been a revision in the system of making extras, etc., which will result in the higher prices being obtained for the products.

ADVICE TO INVESTORS IS FREE

Before you buy or sell stocks or bonds, you ought to secure unbiased expert advice. Send your investment inquiries with stamp to Frank H. Meloon, Financial Editor, Boston Evening American, 5 Winthrop Sq., Boston. All replies are made by mail direct.

BETHLEHEM STEEL

N. D. S., York, Me.—I would like your opinion on Bethlehem Steel.

Ans.—There is a good deal of talk currently concerning the safety of the Bethlehem Steel common dividend, and some short selling has been taking place in anticipation of adverse action. That the stock itself has recognized this possibility is fully evident from the current yield almost of 10 per cent on the $4 dividend established in April, previous to which a $6 annual distribution had been in effect.

Low operations for all steel producers make a dividend reduction more than a possibility, since it is quite obvious that under prevailing conditions directors will make every effort to maintain financial position. The first quarter's dividend distribution even at the lowered rate required the withdrawal of $3,000,000 from the Bethlehem surplus.

Bethlehem, however, has gone a long distance toward discounting the depression, even though lower operations may be experienced before an upturn develops. Efficiency of the Bethlehem plants and its managment has been a much-mooted question, but the first quarter results intimate very plainly that they compare quite favorably with most units in the industry. Per share earnings of Bethlehem, for example, in the first quarter this year were six cents a share, a modest sum, to be sure, but the U. S. Steel Corporation showed only five cents per share.

Bethlehem has been strengthening its trade position throughout the depression, through acquisition of valuable units, such as the McClintic Marshall Corporation, largest structural steel concern. Incidentally, control of the McClintic unit was acquired from the astute Mellons in exchange for Bethlehem stock when the latter was selling materially higher than its present price.

Bethlehem shares appear to have discounted a reduction in the dividend. Complete omission of payments, however, would prove unexpected.

MEAGER MARGIN

W. C., Malden Do Niagara-Hudson Power and Transamerica look like good purchases at current levels?

Ans.—Though Niagara-Hudson pays 40 cents a share annually, the stock is a speculation. Net income for 12 months ended March 31, 1931 amounted to 55 cents a share, against 61 cents in the preceding year. Transamerica is a speculation. Earnings in 1930 were 79 cents a share, against $3 in 1929. October 25, 1930, the annual rate was reduced to $1 a share against $1.60 paid since the 150 per cent stock dividend September 29, 1929. It would appear as though the dividend were insecure but an official recently said that in case earnings should prove insufficient during the current year a part of the large surplus could be used, to a reasonable extent, to maintain payments.

WOULD MEAN LOSS

R. S., Boston—I own 25 shares Missouri-Kansas-Texas as 65. Shall I hold or sell?

Ans.—Were you to dispose of Missouri-Kansas-Texas common now you would take a severe loss. Future prices, however, are not known. The stock is a speculation. An initial dividend of $1 a share paid June 30, 1930, was duplicated September 30 and December 31, 1930. Payment expected March 31, 1931, was omitted. Net income for 1930 was equivalent to $3.01 a share, compared with $5.10 in 1929. For four months ended April 30, 1931, operations resulted in a deficit of $497,254, after all charges, consisted with surplus of $618,678 in similar period of 1930.

FIRST INVESTMENT

D. C., Somerville. Please mention some securities for $1500. It is my first investment and I am in poor circumstances.

Ans.—Under present economic conditions, $1500 cash in the savings bank is not too much.

STATE STREET SIDELIGHTS

State st. brokers think further reactionary periods should be looked on as presenting a chance for those still retaining an active interest to purchase stocks in anticipation of a moderate rally. Accumulation for the long pull was stimulated to a small degree by the bullish utterances of a leading statistical service, but the efforts of bullish professionals are thought to be mainly responsible for the stability of prices.

The weakness of Westinghouse is said to be due to the selling of bears anxious to harass the constructive operations of a former leader of their forces. If this is so, they have apparently been misled as to the stocks the Bostonian is interested in at present. Inquiry of those familiar with his affairs reveals that he disposed of his interest in this equity last week.

Conservative bank stock specialists whose advice to defer purchases has been recorded here in the past have adopted a more friendly attitude toward bank shares. They are now willing to permit their clients to accumulate a moderate amount of the leading Boston and New York bank shares

An investor considering the purchase of Boston bank stocks can afford to use the investment program of savings banks as a guide in making commitments. A check of over-the-counter houses catering to savings institutions in Massachusetts reveals that Atlantic, Shawmut and First National banks of Boston are favored at the moment.

Hamilton Brown Shoe Co., which has been in the hands of a receiver since May, 1930, following receivership suit filed by Continental-Illinois Bank & Trust Co. has filed a petition in federal court here asking that suit be dismissed and receiver discharged. Hearing has been set for June 19.

OLYMPIC VICTORY DECIDED DEGLANE'S CAREER

FANNING

By GEORGE UNDERWOOD

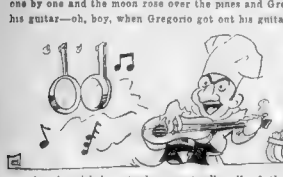
More on Champions. And What They Eat. Pug's Bill of Fare. | Dempsey Ate Cake. But Don't Think He Was a "Cake Eater."

Gregorio, Paolino's Guitar-Playing Chef

When Gregorio got out his guitar—
You'd rather hear it by far,
Than Paderwis' on piano or Kreisler on 'cello
Playing "Come Down, My Evening Star."
Senoritas would steal from the trees,
Dance fandangos in evening breeze,
The click of castanet we almost hear act—
When Gregorio got out his guitar!

Gregorio was the little Basque chef of Paolino, the Basque heavyweight. And when we start a little yarn on what champions eat for dinner, to follow up yesterday's on what the fighters ate for breakfast, little Gregorio and his guitar eased himself onto memory's film as naturally as a rainbow follows the rain. Gregorio was the best chef we ever have seen. He was a great chef because he could make plain dishes taste as appetizing as fancy ones. Did you ever eat a Basque meal? No! Folks, you don't know what you missed! Especially a Basque meal cooked by Gregorio!

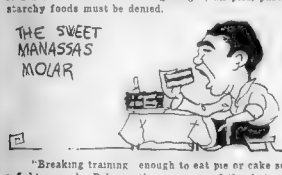
Mayhap, some of the cuisine wizardry displayed by Gregorio was due to his disposition. Most cooks are a bit surly, cross, touchy. The best natured individual might get that way, bending over a hot stove daily in the heat of the summer. But Gregorio always was smiling, happy, always was singing, humming about his work. Always from the kitchen you could hear strains of those catchy Basque, Spanish, French tunes. And when, after the evening meal was over, the dishes done and everything made spic and span for the morrow, the sun died in the West, and stars came out one by one and the moon rose over the pines and Gregorio got out his guitar—oh, boy, when Gregorio got out his guitar.



As chronicled yesterday, practically all of the present day fighters live on two meals a day, breakfast after the morning breather and dinner some time between 5 and 6:30 in the afternoon. The dinner menus run about the same. Plenty of fresh vegetables and salads, no fried meats, and most of the boys also abstain from soups, especially during the hot weather. On some training tables potatoes are barred. Pork or veal is taboo. Roast beef, roast lamb, roast chicken and broiled steaks comprise the meat menu. Few of the champions are big meat eaters. The bulk of the one big meal they have a day consists of fresh vegetables, cooked and uncooked, string beans, spinach, peas, beets, onions, carrots, cauliflower, broccoli, cabbage and green vegetable salads of all descriptions.

Milk, except when a fighter has trouble making weight, is the chief beverage, but most fighters have weak tea with their evening meal, and some top off with a demi-tasse, or even a large cup of coffee. On most training tables, however, coffee is barred, except, perhaps, at breakfast.

There is a big difference of opinion in the matter of dessert. A training table always is loaded with fresh fruit. Most trainers insist on boxers limiting their dessert to fruit and ice cream, or, maybe, a little rice or bread pudding. Pie is generally taboo, although the old-fashioned training idea that pie is harmful to an athlete in training is passing. Pie will not hurt any athlete training hard who limits himself to one big meal a day. But, of course, if a boxer has trouble making weight, all pies, pastries, potatoes, starchy foods must be denied.



"Breaking training" enough to eat pie or cake sometimes does a fighter good. Relieves the sameness of the diet. We recall sitting down to a birthday dinner with Jack Dempsey when he was in training for Firpo, when Jack had two or three helpings of his own birthday cake

Of all the scrappy scrappers, name one who'd give and take
Like William Harrison Dempsey—all honor to the name
Another Manassa Mauler! How he would help The Game!

Some fighters run to the extremes. Take those two foreigners, Firpo and Paolino, for instance. Firpo was a tremendous meat eater. Paolino practically a vegetarian. In addition to devouring three or four pounds of steak a day, the wild Bull of the Pampas specialized in highly seasoned foods. Paolino was the exact opposite. The bulk of his evening meal was uncooked vegetables. He would devour a salad of a dozen tomatoes and a couple of heads of lettuce. His vegetables were cooked in water, and disguised and flavored with no sauces.

We never have seen a chef cook cauliflower or cabbage like Gregorio, the genial little Basque who presided over Paolino's kitchen. Somehow Gregorio managed to make all the vegetables retain their full and natural flavor. But, when Gregorio got out his guitar—

When Gregorio got out his guitar—
Sure Heav'n's gate would open ajar!
On it soft he would strum and all hands would hum,
Tra la, la, la, la, la, la, la!
Oh, under the big golden moon,
He'd croon an old Spanish tune,
And, we all would join in and warble like sin—
When Gregorio got out his guitar!

NEW 4-BALL LEAGUE IS FORMED

By BILL GRIMES

Due to the success which the various Greater Boston four-ball leagues are enjoying, representatives of the Blue Hill, Sharon, Walpole, Highland, Needham and Franklin Country clubs have organized the Norfolk four ball league.

The Norfolk Four Ball League will play its initial matches next Sunday afternoon. Pres. C. E. Davenport is arranging the schedule, which calls for home and home matches.

Although the courses are all nine-hole layouts, the Norfolk Four Ball League should develop keen interest and stage a merry battle for the Davenport Cup, which has been donated by the president.

The royal and ancient game has taken hold well throughout Norfolk County, and the new four ball league will further stimulate interest.

Rain Halted Boston League

Only three Boston Four Ball League matches were played yesterday. The Charles River-Country Club and the Brae Burn-Wollaston matches were postponed because of the rain. But the other six teams were in action.

By shutting out Weston and thereby annexing 18 points, Woodland bounded up in the standing. Although Weston has been one of the weak sisters in the Boston Four Ball League this spring, Woodland's feat was wholly unexpected.

The Winchester Country Club did a job on Belmont Spring, taking 15½ points, while Commonwealth was on the long end of a 12½ to 5½ match with Oakley.

The postponed Charles River-Country Club and Brae Burn-Wollaston matches will be played off tomorrow afternoon at Charles River and Wollaston. The Charles River team has practically been conceded the championship, needing only two out of 18 points to clinch the title.

A CAMEL CAN, NOT HENRI!

A camel can what? Why, we thought you knew! A camel can go seven days without a drink. But who wants to be a camel? Not Henri DeGlane. Henri comes from Labelle, France, where they are brought up on light wines. Wine is a necessity adjunct to his training table. Howdja like to dine with Henri? Wouldn't it be a dastardly plot if Joe Malcewicz, whom DeGlane meets at the Arena tomorrow night, would steal all of Henri's Medoc Superieur, not to say anything of his plain vin rouge and vin blanc! Without wine DeGlane says even a baby could throw him. A lot of folks agree with Henry.

MAT CHAMP QUIT ARMY TO TAKE UP WRESTLING AS HIS LIFE'S OCCUPATION

This is the third of a series of articles in which Henri DeGlane, world's heavyweight wrestling champion, tells his life's story to Jack Conway, Wrestling Editor of the Boston Evening American

By HENRI DeGLANE
(As told to Jack Conway)

I spent two years at Ecole Normale Joinville le Port, famous French military school.

Before entering the school, I had served for a short period in the army. I was not obliged to serve a full enlistment on account of the fact I was going to attend the government military school.

I believe my two years at the French military school did more than anything else to develop me as an athlete. In addition to receiving plenty of opportunities to engage in athletics I was instructed in proper training methods.

In France athletic directors must receive a certificate from the government before they are permitted to instruct anybody. They are obliged to study anatomy, gain some knowledge of medicine and master the ordinary ills of the human body.

While at the military school I did some wrestling, but I was also active in gymnastics and in other sports. I was particularly fond of rugby. I also tossed the javelin.

During week-end, we often went hunting. I find that hunting is not only a splendid sport, but it helps to build up a strong, healthy body. Hunting keeps one in the open air, which is the greatest possible thing for health.

Picks Mat Career

When I was graduated from the military school, I had the choice of entering the army with a commission or going back into civilian life. I was anxious to become a professional wrestler and so decided to return to civilian life. I located in Paris where I started the campaign which ended with my defeating Stanzler Lewis in a bout for the heavyweight championship of the world.

I had done some amateur wrestling while in the military school, and so was prepared to enter tournaments upon my return to Paris. I met with considerable success and was selected to represent France in the Olympic games at Paris in the summer of 1924.

That tournament established me as a wrestler. I wrestled 14 men during the three days of the tournament and came through the heavyweight class without meeting defeat.

It was a proud day for me when the French colors were hoisted to the top of the main flagpole following my victory.

When the Olympic games ended I found that my services were in great demand as a result of my tournaments. I also received an offer from the Empire Theater in Paris. I was asked to appear in an athletic act. I accepted this offer.

On the same program with me was Georges Carpentier, famous French boxer who has done more to increase interest in athletics in France than anybody else.

Carpentier Idol

Carpentier had quit the ring and was appearing in a dance and song act. Georges is very graceful and has established himself as a first class entertainer.

The close contact with Carpentier was pleasing to me. He had been my idol. Georges talked with me about boxing and also about correct training methods. He was always willing to give me helpful advice.

Carpentier mentioned the $200,000

GRAND SALUTE WINS CUP

Ascot, Eng., June 17 (AP)—Grand Salute won the Royal Hunt Cup today. Edward Esmond's Eilen Bon ough was second, and Racedale, owned by the Dowager Lady Nunburnholmes, was third. Eighteen horses ran.

The winner, by Grand Parade from Fletchette is owned by Lord Glanely. He was half a length in front at the finish. The betting was 5 to 1, 50 to 1 and 28 to 1. The cup is worth $500 and the stakes $10,000, with extras. The distance is seven furlongs, 155 yards.

The race was robbed of one of its traditional features because heavy rain during the night made the course unfit for the royal carriage procession, and the royal family and their guests drove from Windsor Castle by automobile and the state procession was omitted.

The country folk were out in great numbers most of them carrying raincoats, for the weather was still threatening.

Two highly regarded American horses, A. C. Bostwick's Vera and William Woodward's Flange, finished far back in the field as H. F. Clayton's Six Wheeler won the Ressborough stakes at Ross, Ascot today.

As the result of his failure today it is doubtful if Vain will be sent back in the coupled 2nd cup tomorrow. The Fontaine colt was shipped here last winter after showing great promise as a distance horse in America.

SWEEP ALL OUT OF DERBY

Chicago, June 17 (AP)—Saxon Alt, who finished second to Twenty Grand in the Kentucky Derby is out of the $50,000 American Derby to be decided at Washington Park next Saturday. The announcement was made today after examination of the injured leg of the leading western hope in the race.

The injury is not serious, Dr. Joseph M. Kaiser, official track veterinarian said, but the valuable three-year-old will have to be given a rest or risk the danger of being ruined for racing. Sweep All, owned by Charles T. Fisher of Detroit, damaged his leg while running in the Derby trial at Washington Park yesterday.

Insco, another Derby entry, broke down so badly in a race a few days ago that Dr. Kaiser advised the insurance company that the $50,000 three-year-old, owned by Griffin Watkins of Alton, Ill. should be destroyed.

Insco is insured for $50,000 officials of the insurance company will decide today whether the animal should be killed.

Bobby Jones May Play at Winchester C. C.

By BILL GRIMES

Having received information to the effect that Bobby Jones is scheduled to play with Milton Reach tomorrow morning at the Country Club of Springfield, the Winchester Country Club has extended Bobby an invitation to play against the British Ryder Cup team Friday afternoon.

If possible Bobby Jones will be at Winchester Friday, but no definite information will be at hand until tomorrow, although Francis Ouimet is waiting this afternoon to hear from Milton Reach as to Bobby's plans for the remainder of the week.

In the event of Bobby Jones accepting Winchester's invitation to compete against the British cup team, one of the local players previously invited will step aside to allow Bobby to enter the exhibition.

Already Francis Ouimet has offered his place, but as Ouimet is one of the big attractions, the Winchester Country Club does not look with favor upon this move.

The British Ryder Cup team will arrive here this evening, having left New York at 2 o'clock this afternoon. They will be quartered at the Hotel Lenox, where they will be met this evening by J. L. S. Barton, "Shorty" Carr, and Harry Bowler of the Winchester Country Club.

Terrill May Land Medford Position

The recent move of the Medford school committee which again voted Art Terrill an assistant to Head Coach Herbert Collins in football, to the job of assistant coach at a salary of $3000, leads many to believe that Terrill will fall right into the baseball coaching job when Coach Roberts will give up when he starts his practice of onerian at the beginning of the school term in the fall. Terrill is a former Medford High star.

Hoboes to Clash With Waltham Nine

The Pittsburgh Hoboes, one of the best novelty road attractions to visit New England, will play one of their few games in this vicinity tomorrow night, when they play the Waltham City Club at Bicycle Park, Waltham. Vanderbilt and Morgan will be the Hoboes' battery, while Parr and Sullivan will perform for the Waltham team.

St. Stephen's Nine Beats Prince Eagles

What the Stars Did

By the Associated Press.

Dave Harris, Senators—Tripled in ninth with bases filled to tie score and scored winning run on error against Browns, 11 to 10.

George Watkins and Frank Frisch, Cardinals—Hit homers in ninth to beat Phillies, 2 to 1.

Ralston Hemsley, Cubs—His double in seventh sent in run that beat Braves.

Boxer Loses Drink of Smelling Salts After Taking

Los Angeles, June 17 (AP)—An unidentified—and very excited—second rushed about his duties as a boxing contest here last night.

Tommy Santos, a preliminary fighter, dropped into a corner at the end of the third round of milling with Martin Zuniga. The second hurriedly shoved a bottle to Santos' lips. The fighter took a huge swallow—and that was the end of the fight.

The bottle did not contain water, it was filled with smelling salts to resolution. Zuniga won when Santos was unable to continue.

CARNERA WILL SHOW HERE

The Italian will have as his opponents, Big Boy Rawson, Big Boy Eurap, and Danny Reagan.

How to Behave at a Boat Race

By MYLES T. McSWEENEY

Those who intend to watch the Harvard and Yale crews race on Friday would do well to throw away the following rules.

3—Don't throw empties into the river. Some of the crews may have bad eyesight and held up the race trying to salvage the bottles.

4—On the observation train, complain about the fact that you're on an observation train. Say you should be on a coach's launch, because you know the Yale coxswain.

5—Keep this rule in your hat. Read the Boston Evening American on Saturday and get all the facts without any of the hardships.

CRANE TAKES 74 TO LEAD IN LEXINGTON GOLF

40 STARTERS IN OPEN TOURNEY

Charles V. Crane of Commonwealth shot a 74 to lead the field of early starters in the annual Lexington Golf Club tournament today.

Crane was out in 35, one under par, but two sixes on the inward round gave him a 39 for a 74. At the first hole, Crane drove to within six feet of the pin, but missed his putt and took a three.

Then after a regulation five on the second, which measures 474 yards, Crane came down with an eagle three at the third, where he was home 10 feet from the cup with a drive and a brassie. He was short with his second, going to the fourth, and then missed a short putt for a birdie.

Although he hooked his tee shot off the fifth, he made a fine recovery and then ran down a 30-footer for a birdie three.

Crane Gets Birdie at Seventh Hole

Crane took a regulation four at the sixth and then came up with another birdie after driving the seventh green. He was on the eighth green from the tee, but took three putts and then slipped one over par at the ninth, where he was short with his second. After a beautiful chip shot he missed a foot and a half putt for his par.

Although Crane failed to get canch the 10th green from the tee he chipped on and dropped his putt for three.

After driving into the rough at the 11th, Crane came out nicely with an iron, was home with a niblick and took two putts for a par five. He was on the edge of the 12th green with his second, chipped on and then a long 4-foot putt for a four.

Starting with a hooked tee shot and a second which hit a tree and went into a gully forcing Crane to take two to get out, another two to get home, with two putts for a six.

On the 14th he got another birdie by running down a 30 foot putt but he came with his second six at the 15th where his tee shot went out of bounds. Crane was just short of the 16th green in two and although he chipped close he missed the putt.

Then he drove the 17th green but on his second he was down in two putts for his three. Crane's drive off the 18th tee buried itself in the side of a bank, from where he blasted out but the ball only went about six feet and was still in the rough, and his third was short of the green.

He played a high niblick shot to the green and ran down a 12 footer for a five.

purse he had received from Tex Rickard for boxing Jack Dempsey at Jersey City. I was astounded at a boxer getting such a vast sum of money for a single bout.

When I completed my stage engagement, I was more eager than ever to become a professional wrestler.

In addition to wrestling, I also gave lessons in physical culture. This brought me into contact with some of the leading people in France.

MOHOLL WINS CHALLENGE CUP CHASE

The soft footing and muddy condition of the course today caused so many scratches in the field of the 31st running of the Challenge Cup steeplechase at The Country Club, Brookline, that only two horses started, and Moholl, ably ridden by Mr. Jack Skinner, won by a neck from Marbro, which had Mr. Bobby Davis up.

Although the footing was slippery, neither horse faltered during the race and each took the jumps perfectly. At the conclusion of the two and one-half-mile grind both horses and riders were covered with mud.

Moholl was away fast and led going over the first jump. When the second jump was passed Moholl had a seven-lengths' lead on Marbro. The latter steadied then and gradually cut down Moholl's advantage.

Coming down the stretch, Marbro staged a thrilling spurt to draw up closer with every stride, on the flying Moholl. The sprint was staged a bit too late, however, for Moholl splashed under the wire winner by a neck.

The small field in the Challenge Cup was a disappointment to the spectators, who had hoped to watch one of the big races of the day. Owners of the other horses entered were unwilling, though, to risk their mounts' safety in the race.

The crowd was large, considering the forbidding weather conditions. For a short time the sun peeked through the mark, but retired after brightening the scene for a few minutes.

Raincoats and umbrellas effectively hid the colorful finery which usually makes the Country Club meeting seem almost like a fashion show.

Mrs. John A. Whitney's horses almost had a corner of the honors in the fourth race, the 12th running of the Chamblet Memorial chase, for her iridescent won and her Game Cock took second place, 20 lengths back of the winner. John J. Nesbitt's Mayfair was a good third.

Six horses started in this race and all swept home without a spill, which was remarkable, considering the bad footing.

The field was bunched over the first two jumps, and then it began to string out. Over the fourth jump Iridescent was well in the lead and from that point on it was just a romp for the winner. The second and third place winners for their final positions all through the race.

DIAMOND DUST

By JOE CASHMAN

The Braves, Boston's most successful big league club in a dozen years, are on their way home today after finishing their first Western trip in a blaze of glory by winning five out of seven games from the champion St. Louis Cardinals and Chicago Cubs.

They return to the Wigwam tomorrow to play six games in four days with the league-leading and champion St. Louis Cardinals and will then take on every other opponent in the circuit before hitting the trail again.

It may be hard to believe, but if the Tribe can gain the edge in the engagement with the Cards, it will be a very serious pennant contender and stand a fine chance of reaching the top during its long home stay.

Going into the fourth inning of the final game with the Cubs, the Warriors were leading, 7 to 0, and it looked as though they were going to make a clean sweep of the series, but the Windy City crew landed on Ray Moss in the next frame, continued their bombardment at the expense of Zachary, Selbold and Brandt, and finally won out, 8 to 7.

As ineffective as was Guy Bush, Cubs' speed-ball artist, against the Braves yesterday, when he permitted six runs in the first inning, he was better than on his first appearance against them at Braves Field last month. On that occasion, he was found for eight runs before he could retire the side in the initial stanza.

It is unusual for a club to overcome a seven-run lead and win, but not only the Cubs but the Senators did it yesterday. Trailing the Browns 9 to 2 at the end of the third, the Solons knocked Wallace Hebert, young southpaw, who beat the Athletics in his first big league start last week, out of the box and landed on George Blaeholder in the ninth for four runs to chalk up their 11th straight victory, 11 to 10. As the league-leading Mackmen were idle, the Senators are now only 2½ games back of the roof.

MALCEWICZ SAYS HE'LL WIN TITLE

By JACK CONWAY

Joe Malcewicz, Utica Panther, says he will knock Henri DeGlane from his heavyweight wrestling championship throne when they get tangled up in a finish bout at the Arena tomorrow night under the direction of Paul Bowser.

Malcewicz points to the fact that Ed George held DeGlane to a draw at Buffalo on Monday night. DeGlane and George each scored a fall during 25 minutes of wrestling. The bout was stopped at 11 o'clock under the ruling of the New York Athletic Commission which does not permit mat contests to last beyond that hour.

DeGlane stated today that if the Buffalo contest had been to a finish, that he felt he would have won.

Malcewicz, with 24 straight victories to his credit, is of the opinion he will come through with a win tomorrow night.

Al Morelli of Boston College will clash with Bill Demetral, Greek heavyweight, while Bonnie Muir, Australian heavyweight, will take on Bibber McCoy, formerly of Holy Cross.

Young Jack Thompson will receive a guarantee of $5000 and the privilege of accepting 20 per cent of the receipts for his ten-round bout with Lou Brouillard of Worcester which will be staged at the Boston Garden on June 30.

JOHN KELLY, OF MEDFORD, SECOND

Russell Jellison, running under the colors of the Boston Athletic Association, won the Mayor James M. Curley road race today at Charlestown. Jellison romped home in 12 minutes, 33 seconds.

John Kelly of the Medford A. A. was a close second, finishing one second later than Jellison.

Bob Campbell and John McLeod, both of the Dorchester Club; Leonard Chisholm, unattached and Anthony Haskell of the Lynn Y. M. C. A. were the next finishers in the order named. Thirty-five runners started.

A. Millini won a gold watch, awarded to the first Charlestown resident to finish. Millini crossed the line in 14 minutes, 35 seconds.

The runners started at Fay and traveled along Main st. to City sq., to Charlestown st. to Bunker Hill and back to the finish at Fay sq.

STRIB HARD ON SPARRING PALS

Geagua Lake, O., June 17 (INS)—It wouldn't take much argument today to convince some 1200 fight fans who were at the W. L. "Young" Stribling training camp here last night that the Georgian heavyweight challenger was in a fighting mood when he started his scheduled six-round ring drill.

Stribling pounded away mercilessly against four sparring partners. He unleashed numerous powerful punches which sent three of the four ring opponents to the showers with bloody faces. Only Sunny Jim Williams, giant dusky Call-Jordian, escaped being battered.

Stribling, who meets Maxie Schmeling, German champion, for the world's heavyweight crown in Cleveland July 3, was to take things easy today. The oft-announced schedule of a bit of road work and perhaps a round of golf was to make up the day's program of activity.

New Ball League in Park Dept. Circuit

The Boston Park Department has organized another new softball baseball league which will be confined to the Hyde Park district, all games to be played at Smith Field and Readville Field in that section.

The circuit is comprised of six clubs and will be known as the Hyde Park League.

The teams in the loop are the Hyde Park A. A., St. Ann's, St. Adalberts Hyde Park Town, Hyde Park Tigers and the Hazelwoods. The new circuit makes the 20th of its kind now being conducted under the athletic division of the Park Department, every one of which is proving successful.

Schaaf Willing to Fight Primo Carnera

New York, June 17 (INS)—Promoter Jimmy Johnston today was planning on a bout at Ebbets field, Brooklyn, in August, between Ernie Schaaf, Boston heavyweight, and Primo Carnera, who belted out Pat Redmond in one round Monday night. Johnny Buckley and Jack Sharkey, Schaaf's handlers, have consented to the match.

The gross receipts at the Carnera-Redmond show were $43,000, of which Carnera got $11,819, Redmond $5409 and the promoters a profit of about $7000.

GOOD GOLF

By CHESTER HORTON
"Golf's Greatest Teacher"

One fine way you can help your golf is to dismiss all concern about "upright" swing, "flat" swing, medium "upright" swing, and so on. In the final analysis there is only one swing — the mechanically correct swing. The diagram shows an exact picture of it. It is the golf swing as it should be. If you begin thinking "upright" swing you will be likely to so swing your club that it will be in front of the plane line shown when you are at the top, and consequently to the left of the plane line at your finish. Keep a plane line something like this in your mind as you swing and your shots perhaps will go better.

Death came to a wedding feast because some kind friend of the family offered to make the salad and the sandwiches and unconsciously contaminated the food with typhoid germs. Read about this in the American Weekly section of the next Boston Sunday Advertiser.

HARVARD SHELL SHIPS WATER

Red Top, Ct., June 17 (AP)—White caps on the waves gave indications from shore before the Harvard crews went out on the Thames river for morning practice today that rough water would be met. It proved so rough that all crews had their time afloat cut short. All shells shipped water before they got back to the float.

The junior varsity rowed easily to the submarine base, and then paddled back.

The varsity boat went up stream half a mile, sought smoother water on the opposite shore and failing returned to the float.

The freshmen had a half mile row down stream and return, and the combination crew did about the same distance up stream. The weather turned warm at noon, the sun came out but the wind gave no promise of letting up in the afternoon.

Jones Slated for Coach at Newton

Lucius "Biff" Jones, who has been assistant coach at Newton high for several years, has been named to be head coach of the baseball team next spring, succeeding John Sullivan, who is resigning.

Jones transferred to Harvard from Pomona College, California, and Cambridge was captain of the baseball team before moving up to the varsity as a first-sacker. After graduating he was with Connie Mack's Athletics for a year,

Brown Leads Field in Amateur Tilt

Mamaroneck, N. Y., June 17 (AP)—J. Walcott Brown, of Spring Lake, N. J., a former New Jersey champion, took the lead in the first 15 holes of the qualifying rounds of the Metropolitan amateur championship today with a 75.

Rosenbloom Defends His Title July 17

NAVY RULES IN REGATTA ON HUDSON

By BILL CORUM

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., June 17 (INS)—For the water take a sailor every time.

While the "experts" floundered on a rain-pelted Hudson last evening, a despised and half-forgotten Navy crew came slugging out of the murk to win the 54th annual intercollegiate rowing regatta in the third fastest time in the long history of this famous four-mile course.

With close to 50,000 thoroughly drenched and thoroughly amazed spectators looking on from observation train, boat and dark green highlands shore, ole Dick Glendon's surprising midshipmen drove the bank of the Severn took the lead from a pace-setting Washington crew at the three-mile mark and went on to stand off a fast-closing Cornell crew in the final drive.

The sailors' time, 18 minutes 54 1-5 seconds, has been bettered only by California's world record in 1928 and one of Pop Courtney's fabled Cornell crews in 1901, which isn't bad for a boat which scarcely had been accorded a chance in the pre-race dope.

A favorite and highly-touted Cornell eight, which possibly delayed its hid just too long, but more likely it wasn't quite good enough as the race was rowed, finished second behind the gallant middies.

Washington, Early Leader, Is Third

Washington, which for almost three miles had looked the winner, held on gamely to save third. And the Golden Bears of California, the only other far-western representative, drove home behind the Huskies. Syracuse, batting rough water down its outside lane, was fifth, Penn was sixth, Columbia seventh, Wisconsin eighth and M. I. T. ninth and last.

On such little things do destinies hang that if the race had been postponed 24 hours, as it might well have been in face of the fearful weather conditions, the winning crew would not have been in it at all.

The Navy had previously booked passage for its oarsmen on the Leviathan leaving New York this morning, and thus would have been forced to withdraw had the committee decided on a not unlikely postponement.

Time after time old Dick had shaken up his eight, but always, it is remembered now, it was the same eight. Capt. Howard Shelton, a veteran, started the year at stroke, but he was up at number three when the boys in blue went whaling down the victory lane.

In his place a youngster so unknown that none of the rowing writers yet know his first name was pulling the all-important stroke oar. As far as the boys in the observation car were concerned, he was just Midshipman R. P. Hunter. But as such, or by any other name, for that matter, he did quite well.

Nothing to It, Says Stroke Hunter of Navy

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., July 7 (AP) There was nothing to it, if you listen to Raymond P. Hunter, husky product of Sherman, Tex., who stroked Navy's shell to a surprising victory over the strongest crews in the land on the Hudson today.

"All we did was to make up our mind to beat Cornell, and when we did that there wasn't much else thing left to do," said Hunter, who was elevated to stroke by Coach "Old Dick" Glendon only a fortnight ago.

"I just sat there and watched Cornell out of the corner of my eye, and when I saw they could not overhaul us I knew we had it. We didn't worry about Washington and the rest."

"You know," said Hunter with a wide grin, "the coach must not have thought much of our chances. He left us long before the race started and he saw it all from the observation train. He even let us select the shell we wanted to use. I guess he must be pretty happy."

Canzoneri to Meet Herman Perlick

Broadcasts Lack Variety as Compared With Weekday Bits

Much has been said, not too much, written, with even less actuality done about Sunday broadcasting, insofar as livening up the type of Sabbath program. To be sure, the subject is a ticklish one. It has been set down here on this page before, few big manufacturers, such as sponsor major programs, desire to in any way offend the thousands of listeners constituting radio's audience.

If the truth were known, it is with fear and trepidation that Sunday broadcasting is planned. There are a few sponsors who foster lively and spirited entertainments. For the most part, air offerings are rather solemn as compared with week-day presentations. It seems that no definite check on what is wanted most can be obtained. The result is "play safe" and hold back bits that might border on the frivolous.

Just as all controversial matters, this "old radio custom" brings abundant correspondence, both to studios and to newspapers. But what is there to do when sentiment is found to be equally divided?

Human Dynamite!

General Smedley D. Butler, who talked over two radio stations (WAAB and WBZ) last night, said in part: "Show me one of these hybrid, complacent, 'so-called' Americans who think our John Hancock, Samuel Adams and other heroes of Colonial times were mob leaders, and I'll show you a man that ought to be hanged from a yardarm with as little discussion as possible."

* * *

Song Pluggmg . . . .

So much has been written here in criticism of song plugging by radio vocalists and orchestras that numerous customers have gathered the impression that it is not a legal procedure. The fact is song plugging is quite legitimate; indeed, it is an industry. The complaints registered herein from time to time were, and still are, directed not against professional pluggers, but those whose radio fame has lifted them into the artist class. Such persons might well remember that radio has made them, and that artist ethics and sheer dignity should prohibit such petty commercialism.

George Herman (Babe) Ruth, he who has mastered the art of knocking the cover from baseballs, takes a turn tonight at WBZ, when the clock registers 7:15. Bambino will be interviewed by Arthur Crowley, son of our illustrious superintendent of police. In doing so he allows himself only 10 minutes in which to catch the outbound train that carries those New York Yankees Westward to St. Louis. Attaboy, Babe!

* * *

Kate Smith doubtless will add much to her already nation-wide popularity when she begins, June 23, a series of request programs, called "Tonight's Memory." Somewhere in her regular broadcast at WABC she will sing one or more songs requested by listeners who wish to stir such fond recollections as only songs can revive.

* * *

Here is a campaign slogan that might be used on the radio by the people in 1932. Will someone please make a memorandum and hold it until then? Now is the time for all good parties to come to the aid of men."

"Tremendous idea . . ."

"My power to forecast the nature and needs of the future is limited. Vast accumulations like mine must cope with the unimportant problems of the people who helped to create the wealth.

"What is the use of leaving $5,000,000 to build up tubercular hospitals when ten years hence my death it is not impossible that a cure or preventive may be found for the white plague.

"Let future generations wrestle freshly with their fresh issues I want to leave no moneys that a few years after my death must be expended upon dead issues because of a will made during the period when these issues were alive. My death, Gratton, is of much more importance than the world than my life."

Surplus Fortune

"In a special sense, yes."

"So you see, my surplus fortune is not mine to leave Jennifer, even if I would. And I would not. It is difficult for me to talk to you any further than I have, young man, about my feeling of what the effect of stupendous personal wealth has been on the little group of my family. But just the same, Gratton, therein lies the tragedy of my life.

"A tragedy I do not intend to see perpetuated through the sole surviving member after me, my daughter, who will live to thank the kind hand that at first may seem so cruelly disciplinarian to her . . ."

My simply cannot imagine Jennifer on sight thousand a year." Gratton. Hand me that paper on my desk."

"Here!"

This single typewritten sheet is the holled-down version of the five hundred and forty-eight pages of that manuscript. This simple sheet, Gratton, is my last will and testament, duly sworn and witnessed. My philosophy of life, and of death. My bow to the world, my tribute to it. my hope for its betterment, my bow out of it. My sighs for its defects, my hope for its future. My hope in my child. My faith in her. Listen," he said, and began to read.

On the Air

Adrian O'Brien, 21 year old tenor sensation, is an ideal Horatio Alger subject. Four months ago he had never seen a microphone. Two months later he rose to the position of New England's most talked of radio artist and WNAC's leading light. Yesterday Adrian continued his surge by signing a year's contract with NBC. In a few days the Boston boy leaves for N. Y. to take on his new NBC duties.

WNAC continues rapid changes. Frank Mahler, staff organist, will be supplanted by Edith Langley, who played with Jesse Crawford in Spokane, Washington. Evidence addition to the staff is Dan Cavanaugh, formerly of WEAN . . . Phil Duncan and Arthur Allen return to the air with their Uncle Abe and David skit June 22. The time and place will be the same, WEEI at 6:45, only the locale will be Bucksport in place of Skowhegan . . . The Radio Commission is hearing plans for worldwide broadcasting on short waves . . . British and American broadcasters are working on a plan to bring British programs to these shores between the hours of 8 and 11 p. m. . . . Maurice Chevalier will leave for France during the summer, thereby ceasing his Sunday broadcasts. But his sponsors insist he will return to the air Sept. 6 . . . NBC starts a series of Belgian music Sunday. When will the Czechs be honored?

Bunker Hill Day

Why We Celebrate

THE BATTLE OF BUNKER HILL

The eminence on Bunker Hill, rearing majestically 110 feet into the air, where all may see it and revere its associations, is really the emblem not of one battle itself.

For Bunker Hill, with Concord and Lexington, is as much the actual fact of American liberty as the Declaration of Independence which proclaimed freedom and the Constitutional Convention which framed the republic in a democratic form of government.

The actual battle of Bunker Hill on June 17, 1775, actually taught the world that the American Colonists were not a disorganized mob.

It taught the world, and especially England, that the American farmers and tradesmen and laborers could cope with the most highly organized military force of Europe.

It taught the world that what these men lacked in military technique and strategy they overcame by the fierce passion for independence in their hearts.

The British under Gage had occupied Boston. Here was to be the base for their mighty offensive calculated to rout the rebels and effectually destroy their "pretense" to liberty.

Accordingly the patriots decided to fortify Breed's Hill, overlooking the city. The execution of this perilous mission was confided to Colonels Prescott and Pepperell at the head of a brigade of 1000 men. They seized the hill on the night of the 16th and at the dawn of day on the 17th the English opened their eyes to find a strong redoubt completed there.

The attack began in the afternoon. General Warren was offered command of the colonist forces. He refused the commission and entered the redoubt as an ordinary volunteer.

Two columns of the British advanced up the Hill in simultaneous assault. The patriots waited until they "could see the whites of their eyes." They unloosed a terrific fire. Twice the organized military machine of Britain was repulsed, in disorder and with heavy losses.

When the Americans had exhausted their ammunition, Prescott gave the order to retreat. They received a destructive volley as they left the redoubt and Warren fell, a bullet through his head.

"The Americans had seen superior numbers of the disciplined soldiers of England retreat before their fire, they themselves had retreated only when their munitions were gone, and they had given the proof that they were able to defend their liberties," says an ancient chronicle of the memorable event.

Washington, heartened by this display of courage, came to Boston, took command of the American forces, eventually drove the British out of the city and this scene led through the Delaware, Bennington and Valley Forge to Yorktown.

Lafayette laid the cornerstone of the shaft which marks the scene. Daniel Webster delivered two orations there.

What a glorious history!

All honor to the people of Boston and Charlestown, unafraid to celebrate and commemorate the Battle of Bunker Hill at a time when internationalism is running amuck, when there is roaring in this country a hybrid and diluted nationalism which despises our valorous American history and would entrust our country to the fateful destinies of foreign supergovernments.

The leadership of a Warren today would put a stop to this insane policy which minimises our Army and our Navy and puts us into the middle of the males of world discord.

LET US BE AMERICANS FIRST AND ALWAYS, ON BUNKER HILL DAY AND EVERY DAY.

Spirit Rulers

Sir Oliver Lodge predicts a world ruled by disembodied spirits. Whether they were once dwellers upon the earth or are higher intelligences in some distant world—to be tapped by radio or some such channel—he doesn't say.

But there isn't anything very startling in his prophecy. The world has been ruled by spirits for a couple of thousand years. Buddha, Jesus, Aristotle, Shakespeare, Washington—these spirits, much more powerful now than when they walked the earth—dominate more millions of mankind than do any temporal rulers now living.

At least, they all had a firm grasp of human problems. They know more of what we are up against than do dwellers on some distant planet, like Mars. We hope the Martians—of whom Wells drew a grim picture—will keep off for a while yet. We have troubles enough.

It Goes Farther

By NELSON HARDING

This year's dollar goes much farther
Than the one of 1930.
It rolls clear across the counter
For the goods that it can purchase.

Start this better dollar rolling
And observe how far it reaches;
Send it on a tour of shopping
With its greater buying power.

New York Day by Day

By O. O. McIntyre

Story of Two Dogs

NEW YORK, June 17—Billy, the eight year old Boston, and Rainbow, the year old Sealyham, have suddenly formed a strange canine comradeship. In the beginning Rainbow was looked upon by Billy as a fresh ball of fluff, and if, in his friskiness, he came too close, received a warning growl.

The puppy sensed the right of priority and kept at a respectful distance. Yet it was obvious he wanted to be friends. He had come in a crate from a large kennel of puppies on a big estate in California to live in the cramped isolation of a New York apartment.

He had to endure the leash and other restrictions imposed by the city. The Boston completely ignored him and the puppy in his yearning for dog relationship would make coy advances at his own mirrored reflection, whining joyously and rolling in ecstasy.

His friends are staunch but limited. Of all the dogs I ever saw he is the most complete aristocrat. Rainbow is the lovable clown, lumbering about in awkward falls and always up to some harmless hoopla. Bathed one hour, the next he suggests a chimney sweep after a tough day at the office.

After a month or so it was noticed Billy's total indifference broke down a trifle. When the button-eyed Sealyham would streak through the house hell-for-leather for no particular reason save the sheer joy of living, Billy would condescend to look at him quizzically. But that was all.

Lately on evening walks, however, if Billy was ahead of the Sealyham, he would constantly look back and wait. A week ago a mongrel attacked the puppy. Billy tore out of grasp, caught the attacker by the throat and held on with bulldog tenacity. Returning in the car, the Sealyham slept with his head pillowed against Billy's hip.

A dejected roysterer dropped into the Lambs for breakfast, sat at the table with his aching head cupped in his hands and moaned. A waiter approached and inquired his order. "Bring me," he said, "a half cup of hot water, a lamb chop and a dog." Puzzled, the waiter ventured: "But why a dog?" Letting go a groan, he sighed: "To eat the lamb chop."

* * *

And Ethel Watters tells of an actress who recently high-hatted her. "I knew her," said the comedienne, "when she couldn't eat." And added: "She wasn't sick, either."

Ethel Watters, incidentally, comes nearest to filling the theatrical niche so long graced by Florence Mills. She has not the wistfulness and bright-eyed, bird-like quality of the late actress, but she has a grand sense of comedy reminiscent of Florence Moore in her hey-day. She is a brown-skin, with sleek black hair. Charlotte Greenwood legs and an extravagant, loose-lipped mouth. When she is on the stage everything moves with a lively kadap.

* * *

There is a triumphant sincerity about a colored show no other theatrical performance achieves. Bob Garland summed it up with: "It is like the help showing off before company."

In Harlem bereaved damsels wear a black heart on their cape or sleeve in memory of dusky lovers who have entered upon the long sleep. One wearing such insignia was asked by her employer how she lost her man. "Oh," she explained "he got to cattin' around and bust into the wrong house."

To Europeans, Harlem's Cotton Club is the town's night life highspot. It was 'discovered' by the cosmopolite George Jean Nathan. Nathan, Ft. Wayne, Ind., born, gives forth a great auro of urbanity. To dine with him you feel certain you must wear a top hat, order broccoli and spiel at least one epigram.

From Arizona again: "I have my choice this morning of reading you or watching the horned toads catch insects. Think of that kind of life."

Vary it by playing squat tag among the cactus, you this and that.

Just Folks

Bill's Gone Back to Work

Bill's gone back to work, an' we Are proud of him as we can be.
Taken off his coat, an' rolled
Up his sleeves, like days of old,
Before the crazy years began
When money came to any man.
When the slump came Bill was sad
Coz it took most all he had,
An' he wrote: "They've got me down!
Guess my goose is cooked up brown!"
Sat around awhile to learn
If his luck was going to turn.
When his stocks an' bonds were gone
Bill just slapped a mortgage on
That big house of his, an' said
"Better times are just ahead."
Bent on dodgin' work till now,
Thinkin' he'd forgotten how.
"Livin' simple," now he writes.
"Workin' days an' sleepin' nights,
Chucked my foolish pride away,
Turned my back on pleasure gay;
Lost a fortune large an' round,
But my self-respect I've found."

Legislature Needs a Spanking on Power

By John T. Lambert

THE PEOPLE OF MASSACHUSETTS, it seems, will be given a chance to decide whether they want an elective Public Service Commission and easier processes of establishing municipal gas and electric plants.

It is about time.

The Initiative and Referendum were created here not for the purpose of abolishing the Legislature. They were created for the purpose of enabling the people to veto a bad law which a venal Legislature had passed and of enacting a good law which an unresponsive or influenced Legislature had ignored.

For at least five years now the people have waited for the Legislature to adopt some progressive program to curb the local agencies of the Power Trust. The Legislature has either idled away its time or, on the other hand, has adopted a new set of laws which might have been written by the lobbyists of the Power Trust themselves. Meanwhile, some of the finest lighting properties in this State have passed into the hands of alien financiers, who have erected every form of holding corporation conceivable to extract new profits from the pockets of the consumers.

It may be that the people of Massachusetts will not want to establish municipal lighting plants. But there is no doubt that they do want the power to establish such plants. Otherwise they are deprived of any satisfactory club to hold over the heads of the private companies which treat them with contempt, disdain and sheer disregard.

The Initiative and Referendum constitute a club which can compel the Legislature to perform its most responsive and satisfactory work.

The right to construct municipal lighting plants is a club which can compel the private corporations to afford satisfactory service at reasonable rates.

The gentlemen who propose to have these questions submitted to the voters should go through with it to the end. The Legislature has proven derelict. The time has come to spank it and bring it to its senses.

OUR WOOL MARKET

Despite the vicissitudes of trade and the changed economic conditions, Boston has held its rank as the foremost wool market in the world.

The wool business is a legacy of the era when the "wealth of Boston" was the synonym of the prosperity of America.

Wealth concentrated along the northeastern seaboard ere other sections of the country had been settled and their natural resources explored.

These ancestors of ours were daring, ingenious men, unafraid to construct an American merchant marine and to compete in the trade marts of the world. Thanks to them, America adventured upon the sea and pioneered its railroads to penetrate the virgin areas of the West.

The wool business is one legacy that has not been dissipated by the succeeding generations of businessmen, including those on the battle front today.

But they are having their troubles. They now are forced to compete not only against the wool-marketing nations of the world but against their own government, which their taxes help to sustain.

They contribute to the government, and their money in turn is employed by the Federal Farm Board to set up marketing agencies whose tendency is to drive them out of business.

Their patience in the face of this tremendous drive upon them has been extraordinary. Presumably they have proceeded upon the assumption that the government's invasion of private business is doomed to failure. All the signs point that way.

Listen, World!

By Elsie Robinson

Does Education Matter?

DOES EDUCATION matter?

Will Bub and Sis have happier, more useful lives if they receive the proper schooling?

Elsie Robinson

Will they be better citizens for Uncle Sam?

Is their welfare as important as the welfare of wheat and hens, highways, railroads, labor unions?

Is illiteracy dangerous? Does it breed idleness, disease and crime? Or is it quite all right for a powerful country to have hundreds of thousands of people who can't read or write . . . whole sections as ignorant as darkest Africa?

Silly questions? No, the most important questions in a nation's life. For almost 200 years the world has been asking America these questions. And, for almost 200 years, America has been answering them in the negative.

"EDUCATION ISN'T IMPORTANT," we have told the world. "OF COURSE, IT'S ALL RIGHT IF MA N' PA WANT TO SEND THE KIDS TO SCHOOL AND THE TOWN FATHERS WILL PUT UP FOR IT. BUT THE FEDERAL GOVERNMENT CAN'T BOTHER WITH SUCH TRIFLES. WE'RE TOO BUSY WITH OTHER THINGS" . . .

But haven't we a commission or a national bureau or a board of education or "sumpin' "?

Yes, we have various what-nots, scattered around in our other departments which issue reports and suggestions to our State boards. But these reports and suggestions are meaningless BECAUSE THEY HAVE NO AUTHORITY BEHIND THEM. Education isn't a government matter in America. We leave that to the States. And then what happens? That depends on the State.

In some progressive States a great deal happens. They build fine schools, they see that their children attend those schools. But there are whole sections of the country where babies of nine and ten are worked in the fields and mines and factories by their greedy parents and greedier capitalists, and the indifferent State government does nothing about it.

"But wouldn't it be a violation of 'States' rights' for the government to interfere with State schools?" you say.

Then why isn't it a violation of States' rights for a government to interfere with State pigs? Or State roads? IS A BAD ROAD OR A SCABBY PIG AS MUCH OF AN INTERSTATE MENACE AS A DARKENED MIND THAT CAN SPREAD A TRAIL OF IGNORANCE, DISEASE AND DEATH FROM SAN FRANCISCO TO NEW YORK?

PROPER STIES FOR PIGS . . . SANITARY STALLS FOR COWS . . . AND UNCLE SAM WILL SWAT YOU IF YOU DON'T. BUT ANY OLD SCHOOL AT ALL FOR AMERICAN YOUNGSTERS! That's a noble record for a country that's always blowing about what it does for The Family.

America needs a Federal Department of Education and America won't be a civilized nation until she gets it. Next December, when the new Congress convenes, you will have another chance through your congressmen and senators, to vote for that Department. In the meanwhile, you can make things hot by asking your local papers to write about it, your local ministers to preach about it. You can talk about it at the P. T. A.—you can bring it up at the mid-week luncheon. In short, you can raise such Cain that America will get civilized in self-defense. But will you? I wonder
